EARLY BLOOMING SPRING MILLINERY
PROMISES FLOWER SEASON IN HATS

The coming season will see femininity wearing hats like these. At the upper left is shown an effective use of the bandanna drape. Upper right illustrates a becoming flower arrangement. At the center is a smart piece of millinery with the popular bow trimming. At the lower left is a silk hat with leather applique designs.

(BY MARION HALE)

The new spring hats, blossoming profusely in midwinter, are characterized by their infinite variety.

To exploit any one shape or style above another is impossible, since big, little and medium-sized hats are all represented in the fashion pageant.

Their predominant trait is their simplicity—that is, simplicity of line. The favored type of adornment for the moment is the big ribbon or lace bow, that may be placed directly in front, on either side, in the back or under the brim. These bows, however, conceal a great deal of art in their folds. The tying of a smart bow is not for the novice.

STRAW OR SILK

Many hats are of straw or silk in soft shapes, entirely covered with embroidery in silk or wool. Flowers of crocheted wool and of leather or silk are effectively applied on crowns and brims.

This evidently is to be a flower season. Many small cloche shapes have the brim composed of small flowers, while others decorate the crown profusely with petals and join it to a wide brim of silk or straw.

Rosettes of silk or ribbon are a youthful form of trimming—so in the bandanna kerchief, tied jossily about the crown, with the ends tucked under or flowing off at the side.

BROWN AND TAN

Most of the small hats one sees are highly colored. Almond and Nile green, Alice blue, orange and the light shades of brown and tan are exceedingly popular.

When the all-black hat is seen usually it is the large picture type or a tailored affair, trimmed with a small ribbon bow or with feathers. Some of the most recent Paris importations are entirely untrimmed—their style and chic lying in their lines.

The earliest hats are of combination fabric and straw. The felt hat, so popular during the winter, is also popular for spring.

Mrs. Helen Cordier, S. Baxter-st, was pleasantly surprised Thursday evening, when members of the P. H. C. degree team, their husbands and friends assembled to help Mrs. Cordier celebrate her birthday anniversary. Music, games and cards were the diversions. In the card games, Miss Lela Turner held high score among the ladies and Earl Burkholder among the men.

The following were Mrs. Cordier's guests: Mr. and Mrs. Walter Sweeney and son, Mr. and Mrs. William Montague, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sellers, Mr. and Mrs. Earle Burkholder, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Veen, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Rittenhour, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Bradford, Mrs. Maude Dennis, Mrs. Leticia Lofatt, Mrs. Cleo Glass, Mrs. Lela Turner and son and Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Cordier.

A surprise event was held at the home of Isa Pond, S. Main-st, Wednesday evening. Cards and music were the diversions and at a late hour delightful refreshments were served.

Mouvier, Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Pond, Mr. and Mrs. George Pond, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Stillwagon, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Stillwagon, Mr. and Mrs. John Burke, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burke, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Burke, Mrs. Julia Spornhour, Mrs. Goldie Burke, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Burke, C. M. Adam, Joe Burke, Miss Velma Long, Harvey Lawson, Mrs. D. Growden, H. Salder, Ohio City and C. Steiner, Wapakoneta.

They will reside in Huntington, where Mr. Kehres recently leased a five-room apartment. He is manager of a 5 and 10 cent store there.

Both are popular young people and have numerous friends in Delphos. Miss Hira is a graduate of Jefferson high school.

VAL OF PARADISE

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JOHN HANNON, wealthy ranch owner, his wife, BELLE, and their beautiful daughter, VAL, live happily together in Hannon's wonderful home, Paradise, Redstar, king of the Red Breed of horses, disappears from Paradise.

THEY HILLAIRE in charge of the mission, introduces Val to his friend, VELLANTHIE, from the border. BLUDGE CLENDENNING, son of Val and favored by her parents, declares he will head the ride of gentlemen to run to earth rascals who may have stolen Redstar.

Val decides she will accompany them, but is persuaded not to by TOM BRISTON, foreman of Paradise and close friend of Val.

GO ON WITH THE STORY
So—she looked into Val Hannon's eyes, and his own blue ones said "I love you," with every glance, while his lips spoke trifles and laughing jests.

At last he rose and took his leave and the two in the garden watched him go.

As he swung from the gate Val's eyes begged mutely "You will come back?" and he hesitated—then flashed, "I will."

Father Hillaire stood in the gate and sadness sat upon him like a garment, and the girl touched him twice before he turned.

"What is it, father?" she asked anxiously. But he shook his head again.

"Nothing that I can speak of," he said.

And all the way home to Paradise she troubled over the vague speech—what time she could take from the glowing dreams that people the high heavens and covered the world with light.

CHAPTER XIV
The Stirring Talk

John Hannon came back to Paradise. In the gold and crimson twilight of a summer's dusk they heard the far, faint sound of horse's hoofs, and Belle, whose hearing was marvelously acute, caught it first.

She rose from a chair in the shaded patio and held out a hand for silence.

"Hush!" she said, and Val and

SHE ROSE FROM A CHAIR IN THE SHADED PATIO AND HELD OUT A HAND FOR SILENCE.

Briston, who were talking, became quiet. Perly's cigarette trailed off, his finger tip as he listened, for they all acknowledged Belle's superior ears.

"It," she strained her every faculty for a tense second, then her face seemed to break in a thousand places to let her spirit flash out—"it's Lightning!" she cried, "it's John!"

And it was John—John Hannon in the flesh, who rode straight to the patio and, swinging stiffly from his saddle, caught her to his breast. He neither looked at nor spoke to any other for a time—he held this woman whom he loved upon his heart and said no word to any. Between these two none were needed.

But Belle's hands trembled on his shoulders and her transfixed face was white as milk. She clung against him with all her strength and the breath fluttered on her lips with ecstasy. And presently the boss swung her around in the bend of his arm and held out a hand to the foreman.

"Well," he said pleasantly, "how's everything?"

"Fine," said Briston, gripping the outstretched hand. "Fine as silk! Glad you're back, tho, John."

With a long sweep of his huge arm John Hannon caught his daughter and brought her in against him on the other side.

Val, contained as herself, but smiling with deep joy, laid her soft fingers over his big hand and gripped it hard. The long dark eyes she turned up to him were his own to the last sweep of lash, the last crinkle that attended them in laughter.

"It's been a long time, 'old man,'" she said affectionately, "and your women have been true to you. They've watched the trails at dawn and dusk—they've fairly acted to see your face, sometimes."

With one of the rare, the very rare, caresses that passed between them John Hannon bent and kissed his daughter's cheek. Then he turned to the riders, who came clumping in along the stone flags, shaking hands and demanding news of the ranch.

To Jose, who came quietly reaching for lightning's rein, he gave a pointed look and a sharp word of direction. It was needed, for the beautiful gelding stood in the dusk with hanging head and dull eyes, his erstwhile sleek coat caked with dust and cut by trickling sweat, his slim legs trembled with fatigue, his nostrils shook with the heavy breaths that rattled in his sides.

"Great Pete, John," said Perly wonderingly, "but you've put the red boy thru! The Black Rustler been chasin' you?"

The boss laughed and ran a hand thru his thick gray hair, while he tossed his heavy hat away.

"Not exactly, but I was in a hurry to get home. Been gone long enough—eh, Belle, my girl?"

"Oh John!" said Belle, and the word was eloquent.

"An' as I said once before," he continued, "there's somethin' by-ordinary in that Lightning horse. I'd stake a lot on him if I was bein' chased, for he's got the wind an' the stayin' stuff of the Redstar himself, if not the speed. I'd stake a lot on him."

Then his women laid hold on the boss of Paradise and carried him into the depths of the cool old house and there was much running of feet, and swift orders and the stir of deft hands in the kitchen, while a white cloth was laid on a little table in the living-room, for they must needs feed him at once and bring him a basin of water and a

While the master ate with a hearty zest they told him all that had happened in his absence, even to the raid of the Flying Y and the driving of the eighty fat steers into the Blind Trail Hills, of the damages that had guarded the "pass," a d of the slow rage of the cattle-men against the Black Rustler.

John Hannon listened attentively. "Boyce Clendenning's at the head of things," said Belle, "and what that man undertakes he'll weigh put to it. I've met him, John, he was here one day—and I hold with you concerning him, he's a real man and no mistake."

"Yes," said Val, humorously, "it's a mighty good thing you're home, dad. I had to hold her to keep her from following him off. She almost fell in love with Boyce."

"Why, you story teller!" cried Belle, indignantly under her own laughter. "John, don't listen to this young upstart. But you know what you have always told me of this boy—of his strength and earnestness. And I think you are right, he is strong and he's very determined. I saw that about this Black Rustler affair. You mark my words, that if the Rustler ever hits this country again, Boyce Clendenning will get him."

John Hannon's dark eyes dropped to the white table before him and neither woman saw or felt the sudden flame of fire that flared in them. It was a momentary flash of mad excitement, such as sometimes shows in the eyes of a drunkard or a lunatic. If John Hannon wanted the Black Rustler caught for any reason, personal or general, he might have felt the potent of the woman's speech, have seen the vision of its fulfillment.

In Santa Leandra there was beginning to stir a hidden speech. When next the Boss of Paradise rode in to town he heard a bit of it, veiled and covered, but to a range man entirely understandable. It felt the pulse of every cattleman, and it felt John Hannon's and was satisfied.

"I'm with the movement," he said steadily, his keen eyes giving back glance for glance to those who spoke.

Dyke Atkinson was in that day and he listened with a grim frown, for his right arm still hung useless.

"I have 't seen it," he told Sanchez later, "I'm still believin' in magic."

Brideman, big, burly, blond and thick with money, heard the remark and his eyes twinkled.

"Yes," he said gently. "John does seem 't have it, that's a fact. An' yet, you know, the Black Rustler struck Paradise at last an' when he did, he hit it hard, magic or no magic, for that there Redstar horse was Hannon's one best bet."

"If he rides," said Dyke, stubbornly, "I'll believe—a little—an' not till then."

And Brideman's deep guitar filled the narrow street as he slapped the speaker on the back with a huge and hairy hand.

"Well," he said, "I guess it don't matter much to the man from Paradise whether any one believes—in magic—or not."

Lolo Sanchez passed that moment with a glance of her black eyes for every man in sight and Brideman looked after her, his bearded face alert.

"That girl o' yours, Sanchez," he said insolently, "is magic, all right." The Mexican shifted on his feet and reached for a paper to roll a cigarette. His thin brown face, intelligent and quiet, changed subtly. He had never forgotten that day of high play at Huzzewell's when Brideman had invited the girl in against his command.

"Yes, Senor," he said, "she is. Bitter magic. Some day she will stir up trouble for some one."

At Paradise the talk of the stirring among the ranchers was daily diet. Perly, loquacious and open-eyed, gathered all he could from riders on the range and hashed it all over of nights in the lee of the bunkhouse where the cowboys lounged and smoked.

The boss heard and listened, and his eyes took stock of every man in his outfit.

Then Boyce Clendenning rode over again, brought Belle some more books, accepted the new ones her husband had brought her in his saddlebags in exchange, and talked long and earnestly with the rancher. They sat out in the patio and spoke alone together, for Val was out on Dawnlight and Belle had due regard for the master's dignity in heavy matters. The plans for catching and hanging a man, he ever man, entirely and guilely, were not things for a woman's ears to her way of thinking—and she regretted Val's eagerness to see them consummated.

Stand Tall! Not Straight! For Health and Beauty

Miss Edna M. Snow, assistant health director health education department, Cleveland Y. W. C. A., posed, as above, to illustrate Miss Bellows' posture rules. At the left, "standing straight," head, neck and shoulders forward; chest, low and hollow; back, weak and round; abdominal muscles, loose and flabby; feet, toes out, flat. At the right, "standing tall," head up; neck, straight; shoulders, held in line with the body; chest, broad, deep and full; back muscles and abdomen, strong and flexible; feet, straight, arches up, toes down.

CLEVELAND — (Special) —

"Stand tall! Not straight!"

That's the advice given to women who would be healthy by Miss Jane Bellows, health education secretary of the Y. W. C. A. national board.

"Your health depends on how you stand," she continues. "Poor health necessarily follows poor posture."

"Also, of course, good health depends on good habits—eating, sleeping, working, playing—also mental as well as physical habits."

MISS BELLOW'S "What's the difference between 'standing straight' and 'standing tall'?"

"Just this—'In standing tall there's an effort to push upward, from the feet, and at the knees, abdomen and neck. 'It's an easy, natural position, in which the muscles are relaxed and in which a person doesn't tire."

"Standing straight, on the contrary, pinches the nerves of the back. It's unnatural and tiring."

PLANKED STEAK

(BY BERTHA E. SHAPLEIGH)

A POPULAR way of serving steak is to plank it. Planking is a primitive method of cooking employed by campers.

For home use, have the carpenter cut a plank, 1 1/2 inch thick and of the right size to fit your broiling oven, from well-seasoned hard-wood, pine or oak.

Soak it a long time before using; then brush it over with salad or cooking oil. Each time it is used, wet it and brush it with oil.

The steak is laid on this board, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and the board is then placed under the flame, at some distance, as it is to be broiled.

Next remove plank from the oven and around the edge place a border of well-seasoned mashed potatoes, to which one or two eggs have been added. Place in a hot oven, to brown the potatoes slightly; again remove, garnish with any desired combination of vegetables and serve at the table from the plank.

It Will Be Your Fault If You Are Not Financially Independent

Abraham Lincoln is one of the most outstanding examples of what a man may make of himself if his desire to succeed is great enough.

It is within the power of any person who earns to have financial independence—in time.

One doesn't need to be so much schooled to save, as he needs to teach himself how to spend.

It is the frustrating way of small sums that keeps a fellow strapped—then he feels himself with the flimsy alibi; that he doesn't get enough to save anything.

It just seems so easy to treat one's self to that temporary, tingling exhilaration of spending five dollars for something he thinks he wants, than to feel that permanent, solid feeling of independence that comes with its denial and saving that five spot.

Future comfort and prosperity will live and grow in the savings account you start now and feed on up each pay-day with another deposit.

Just a dollar will do. Our officers are personally interested in each person carrying a savings account with this bank.

MERIT AND RANGE OF CHOICE FEATURES OF FILM PROGRAMS

MANAGERS ANNOUNCE SCHEDULE

Photodramas Par Excellence Secured for Lima Theatres During Present Week

(BY GERTRUDE GILLHAM)
PHOTODRAMAS of superlative merit and a wide range of choice are included on the week's roster of cinematographs. It reunites two of the most popular stars of the screen, Eugene O'Brien and Norma Talmadge, who have won the highest approval of the perfect screen lovers.

Two pretentious productions are offered by the Lyric theatre for the forthcoming week. "Night Life in Hollywood" is one of the best pictures of recent months, featuring an all star cast of many noted screen artists. This was the last picture in which Wallace Reid appeared before his death. Beginning Wednesday "Fast Mail" is the attraction for the remainder of the week. Eileen Percy has the leading role. "Homespun Folks," a Thomas H. Ince production, is offered at the Majestic theatre for two days, beginning today. Tuesday and Wednesday Viola Dana will appear in "There are No Villains" and for the week-end attraction the public will again have the opportunity to see the excellent picture, "The Rosary" with an all-star cast.

Many favorite cinema stars are being offered at the Quilna theatre today in the production, "Trifling Women," another Rex Ingram triumph. Ramon Navarro, Barbara La Marr and Lewis Stone have the leading roles. "The Forgotten Law," which comes to the Quilna Thursday also boasts an all star cast consisting of Milton Sills, Cleo Ridgely and Jack Mulhall. Special features will precede both attractions.

BILL OF UNUSUAL MERIT AT FAUROT

ACCORDING to advance announcements the Faurot's bill of Keith vaudeville appearing today and Monday is one of unusual calibre. There is variety and many surprises are in store for vaudeville patrons.

Birdland Follies is the initial offering and is said to be the "act supreme" of its kind. A stage full of beautiful birds of every species with each other in making a lot of tropical splendor in this novel presentation. They are also actors—doing many seemingly impossible and astonishing things.

Ed and Wyn in nonsensical nonsense offer a strictly comedy novelty in "Gum to the Hat." The couple dispense several minutes of clever snappy comedy.

"Visions in Fairyland" is a novel act comprising a series of brilliant transformations. There are fourteen happy visions, each one surpassing the previous one in its splendor, and at last the series of surprises burst forth suddenly into one grand surprise. La Gracioso is the delineator of this unusual and enticing act.

Much interest has been generated by announcements that Roy La Pearl, the world's greatest acrobat, is due to be a feature of the new bill. Mr. La Pearl has held the title for a number of seasons. His feature also contains many surprises which I will not divulge. A novelty entitled "A Surprise in the Belfry" will be furnished by the Five B's, four attractive girls and a young athletic man. They will toss heavy weights and perform many difficult routines.

As a whole it appears that Faurot patrons are being offered a bill chock full of surprises and there is nothing we like better than a pleasant surprise.

The Majestic Pictures

HUMOR, pathos, and romance are combined in the Thomas H. Ince production, "Homespun Folks" to make it a tremendous triumph. It is appearing at the Majestic theatre today and Monday.

Perhaps in no American-made photoplay of recent years has there been such a vast wealth of appeal, combining human interest, comedy and melodrama. It deals with a country lawyer's fight against crooked politics and as a modern picture of small town life, holds the mirror truthfully to the real thing.

These are the high lights of "Homespun Folks"—its realism, its truth and its simple honesty. The characters are real, the plot is one of human people and the direction is chock full of master touches.

Lloyd Hughes as the young district attorney, makes a definite step upward in his screen career. Charles H. Matles, Al H. Pilon and Gladys George appear in the supporting cast.

The Lyric's Pictures

BACK in the days when the motion picture industry was in its infancy it was nothing at all to find fifteen or twenty of the most prominent players assembled in one cast. But then, of course—and here's a fact that most people fail to take into consideration—the salaries paid to the players in those days were not boosted up to the plane on which they now rest.

Naturally, with the rising wage scale came an economic re-adjust-

mented until recently, when several all-star cast productions have been made.

This is one feature which assists in making "Night Life in Hollywood" one of the most extraordinary pictures ever created. Not only does it feature such well-known players as J. Frank Glendon, Josephine Hill and Gale Henry, but it introduces such prominent stars as Wallace Reid, which by the way is Wally's last picture before his death. William Desmond, Theodore Roberts, Bessie Love, J. Warren Kerrigan, Sessue Hayakawa, Tsuyu Aoki, Bryant Washburn and Dorothy Davenport. To the ardent picture fan

"Night Life in Hollywood" will come as a vivid reminder of the good old days.

Another thing which makes the production great is the story—a startling and intimate exposition of the home life of the motion picture players who go to make up the most discussed community in the world. Studio life is shown in all its glittering gaiety; we find the gilded cabarets wherein sensually beautiful dancers disport, arrayed in diaphanous robes, midnight motor parties and in fact all the things which go to make up the Hollywood of fact and fiction.

"Night Life in Hollywood" begins

a three day engagement today at the Lyric theatre and it is needless to recommend it further to the attention of theatre goers. Suffice to say it is as unusual an example of screen entertainment as has ever reached our city.

In the forest fires that swept Northern Ontario and Quebec, Ford cars came to the rescue of many a famer and his family.

Hundreds of Ford cars loaded to the limit carried thousands of people out of the fire zone, traveling a distance of seventy-five to one hundred miles to escape the flames. The smoke was so dense that even at midday, bright headlights were necessary. The passengers of many cars were covered with robes to protect them against flying brands of fire. Some of the Fords had their tops burned off, but still they ran, once again demonstrating the fact that "where there's a Ford there's a way."

Are You a Sisyphus?

SIYPHUS was the fellow who was condemned to forever push a large stone wheel up a hill only to let it roll back again.

It was a ridiculous performance and yet it is about what the modern Sisyphus does with his "silver cart-wheels." Always rolling them up by hard labor only to have them come tumbling down again by careless spending. The only way to safely keep them from rolling down is to lock them securely in a savings account.

A Real Riot of Kicks and Kisses

Secrets of Isadora's Honeymoon with Her High-Strung Russian Poet Bridegroom, Who Upset a Staid New York Hotel and Some of Even Her Famously Radical Theories on Matrimony

A Honeymoon Photograph of Isadora Duncan and Her New Husband, Serge Essenine, Taken Aboard the Steamship Paris Upon Their Arrival in New York. Observe the High Russian Boots and the Russian Costume Which the Dancer Adopted to Please Her Husband.

A Charming Posing Photograph of Isadora Duncan Draped in One of Her Gorgeous Dance Shaws.

"A tall blonde, wild-haired, wilder-eyed young man in a mauve silk dressing gown tearing up and down the corridor."

An Expressive Caricature of Isadora by Norman, the Famous Swedish Artist.

THE American honeymoon of Isadora Duncan, temperamental classical dancer, and her beautiful young Russian poet-husband, Serge Alexandrovitch Essenine, on the surface seems as smooth as a Viennese waltz.

But twenty people who involuntarily "listened in" compare it to a jazz band. They heard some harmonious notes, and they heard some discords, and they heard some awfully, awfully noisy crescendos.

Miss Duncan and her poet have been in the United States only a few months. They came here shortly after their marriage in Russia, where the dancer was in charge of the Soviet National School of dancing.

"Marriage is woman's greatest destiny!" proclaimed Miss Duncan to the ship news reporters at Ellis Island, where the couple were detained until they proved they were not agents of Communistic propaganda.

"Where two souls love, there is perfect peace, perfect contentment, perfect happiness! And I love him—my Serge, my poet, my heart!"

The blonde and debonnaire Mr. Essenine, who is a number of years younger than Miss Duncan, flashed her an ardent glance. His lips opened and cataracts of Russian poured forth. None of the ship news reporters understood Russian. But they deduced that husband and wife agreed. The cameras snapped a perfect connubial kiss. The honeymoon waltz filled the air.

The waltz continued to pipe harmoniously for two weeks, while Miss Duncan went on tour. True, Boston tried to bar her for waving a red scarf. True, Chicago said her barefoot dancing was a bit too undraped. True, at the Brooklyn Academy of Music Miss Duncan and her pianist had a "spat."

But so far as the public was informed, Miss Duncan and her bridegroom were just as much in tune as on the day they kissed affectionately aboard the steamship Paris.

And then the honeymooners, after traveling continually since the day they were married, called a brief halt. Like two crooning love bees, they hovered over New York City and finally settled down in a suite at one of Manhattan's most famous hotels.

This hotel is a very old hotel and a very staid hotel. It is reminiscent of Dutch days. Its reputation is as solid as Peter Stuyvesant's. And, like many another hotel of this stamp, its guests are mostly resident guests who like conservatism and quiet and the aristocratic atmosphere.

The arrival of the dancer and the poet did not go unnoticed among the patrons. In fact, they could not have overlooked Miss Duncan and young Mr. Essenine if they had wanted to. Frequently the sound of the Viennese waltz floated from their suite; also, soft and alluring Hawaiian music; also again, cooing noises, sometimes known as "baby talk." Once, it was gossiped among the guests, husband and wife were seen kissing in a taxi.

This state of affairs continued until, at two o'clock on a cold mid-Winter morning, quite a different brand of sound crashed, rumbled and racketed from the Duncan-Essenine suite.

Guests on the same floor, on the floor above, and on the floor below woke suddenly and peevishly. Some of them tried to go to sleep again. They couldn't for the noise. Some of them telephoned the night clerk. The night clerk said he was awfully sorry, but he didn't know quite what he could do.

Meantime the uproar from the bridal suite—a mixture of torrential Russian and soprano American—died down to a whisper and finally ceased. Harassed patrons above, below and on either side turned over on their pillows with heart-felt sighs. Once more they wooed slumber until—

"Thud! Bang! Thud!"

Sombody was trying to kick a door down. There could be no other explanation for it. And, whoever the kicker was, he was booted with a pair of heels that sent echoes resounding from floor to floor. The nodding were wide awake again—and boiling mad.

Out into the corridor where the kicks crashed loudest, poked disheveled heads. Angry eyes beheld a tall, blonde, wild-haired, wilder-eyed young man in a mauve silk dressing gown tearing up and down the corridor, waving his arms, shrieking in an unintelligible tongue; ever and anon pausing before a certain door and planting his heels against it as the mule plants his against his master's.

Standing just beyond the edge of the course the young man trapped were two hotel employees. When he neared them, they backed two steps. When he was at the end of the corridor, they ventured two steps forward. They held out their arms in an attitude of appeal. And they, too, yelled in an alien tongue.

The corridor began to sound like a Tower of Babel—Russian from the young man in the mauve silk dressing gown; French from one of the hotel employees; Italian from the other; excited and not too particular English in a woman's voice on the other side of the door; and "Sh-h-h-h! Sh-h-h-h! Sh-h-h-h!" from the disheveled heads up and down the corridor.

Embroidering this symphony were the kicks.

Entered the scene, at this point, a large Irish policeman. He moved, flanked by the hotel employees, on the young man in the mauve silk dressing gown. He caught the young man by the arm. He bade him, in vigorous Killarney to cease.

In a momentary interim of quiet came another voice: "He says, officer, that he's been kicked out. He says his wife kicked him out. I don't understand much Russian, but I understand he wants to get back in. If he can't walk himself in, he's going to kick himself in. I suggest you appeal to the lady."

The lady was appealed to. But the lady was adamant. She made it plain—in tones none of the scores of listeners had to strain to catch—that many things might happen before morning, including earthquakes, fires and wars, but the one thing that would not happen would be for the door to open.

At which the young man in the mauve silk dressing gown exploded again. Breaking from the policeman's grasp and renewing his wild race up and down the hall, he called upon someone or anyone to get him his "Baggage! Baggage! Baggage!" He pronounced it, however, "bag-garsh!"

He didn't get it, not though he showered more kicks against the door. But he did get, from the anxious management, enough garments to allow him to depart clothed, if not exactly in his right mind.

"I dare say," mused sleepy-eyed guests of the hotel, next morning, "that we won't have any more Hawaiian music and baby talk for a time."

Which shows that you never can count on temperament, especially the temperament of a classical dancer and a Russian poet. Two days elapsed and then—a taxi at the door; a blonde young man running swiftly up the steps; muffled murmurings behind closed door; a voice, "My darling Serge!" another voice, Russian but sweet; and then the scraping of a phonograph needle and the strains of "Kiss Me Again!"

"Ah me!" sighed the guests. "Kicked out and kissed in!"

According to authentic statements among hotel men, the complaint of the management of a certain staid hostelry to Isadora Duncan, requesting her either to flit elsewhere or to honeymoon more quietly, was met only with the answer: "I love him!"

But no more interviews from Miss Duncan have appeared to the effect that, where love is, there too, is perfect peace.

Ships Prepared for Emergency—Ismid Harbor Is Ordered Closed

GIBRALTAR — (United Press) —
One battalion of the Duke of Wellington's regiment was ordered Saturday to depart immediately for Constantinople.

CONSTANTINOPLE — (United Press) — The Turks Saturday night closed Ismid harbor to foreign warships and announced that all lighthouses on the Gulf of Ismid will be extinguished. The situation at Smyrna remains unchanged.

The Turks Saturday detained but subsequently released French and Italian consuls who were taking on coal in the Black Sea port of Sharkic.

SMYRNA — (United Press) — Signals winked from the mastsheads of allied warships in Smyrna harbor Sunday night as British and French naval commanders, with full power to strike back at the first sign of a hostile act on Turkey's part awaited word from Angora of the national assembly's decision that means peace or war.

Ships from all parts of the world snuggled against the charred quays along the city's miles of water front vined that the Turks have sown
the harbor entrance with mines Shippers were warned against routing vessels by way of Smyrna.

French nationals, fearing a Turkish uprising against foreigners, similar to that which occurred when thousands of Greeks were driven from Smyrna, fled from the city Saturday aboard the cruiser Lionestonne, which steamed into the harbor in defiance of the ultimate banning warships of more than 1,000 tons.

This ultimatum was not enforced, the time limit being extended indefinitely, pending decision of the Angora government.

The Turkish congress is meeting to hear Ismet Pasha's report on Lausanne and to decide whether Turkey will make good her vague threats of war.

Mustapha Kemal, generalissimo of Turkish forces, is expected to address the assembly. Influential Turks said to favor war, are inclined to the capital. But opinion prevails there will be no war.

Turkey, if she decides to fight
Britain, can strike in several ways.
Turkish troops in the vicinity of Mosul can move against the small British garrison defending British claims to the rich oil lands.

A clash of arms with Greeks along the Maritza river in Thracia might bring Britain into the conflict. Trouble in Constantinople, an uprising against Christians, might be sufficient to start war.
A hostile act here, such as firing upon British men of war in the harbor, would be a cause of war.

Austrian and German officials are reported to be at Salonika enroute for Angora to join the Turkish army.

The assistant American commissioner at Constantinople warned the Angora representative of the gravity of any hostile act at Smyrna.

ECLIPSE OF SUN
SEPTEMBER 1

Face of Orb of Day to be Hidden for Two Minutes

Total eclipse of the sun will be visible over part of the United States September 1 of this year.
Lasting for about two minutes, but Lima and the mid-west will have only a partial eclipse to view and a very small one at that, even less than was seen here June 18, 1918, when the last total eclipse was visible in the United States.

Lima, however, is becoming rather accustomed to being neglected by such solar phenomena, for the available records show that the last time the moon intervened and totally blotted out the sun's rays from Lima over this territory was in the year that Charlemagne started his war against the Saxons. The eclipse lasted only two minutes, but it took Charlemagne 32 years to finish the war.

The best spot for observing the coming eclipse next September will be on Catalina island, off the coast of California, scientists say, but it isn't likely Lima people will travel that far to see it. The eclipse will last but two minutes.

PASTOR PICKED FOR DEATH BY SECRET ORDER

Killing, Bombing and Kidnaping Plots Unearthed In West Virginia, Police Assert—Murder Mysteries Declared Solved In Arrest of Nine

CLARKSBURG, W. Va.—(United Press)—Steel bars of Harrison-co jail Saturday night were confining nine alleged members of the black hand, all charged with murder, arrested in connection with activities of Clarksburg police and officials of Pennsylvania and Maryland cities.

Police Chief Laoo Wolfe told the United Press that for more than three years a band of men, believed to be members of the black hand, has participated in a series of brutal crimes.

Round up of the nine alleged black handers was completed late Saturday. The arrests had been quietly made during the past week, but reports had been withheld. One by one the alleged gang members were taken by city authorities as they appeared at a secret rendezvous here.

Solutions of many unexplained murders were said to have been effected in the report of Chief Wolfe Plots for further violence were declared to have been learned.

One of the plots was a campaign to be staged against seven Clarksburg citizens, the chief declared.
Rev. T. B. Gainer, pastor of the United Brethren church here, who has been conducting a strenuous campaign against bootleggers, had been marked for "attention" by the alleged black handers. Four foreign born merchants were also marked with the sign of death after their names.

MYSTERIES SOLVED
Three murder mysteries, which occurred in Clarksburg, within as many years, have been solved by evidence uncovered with the arrests, Chief Wolfe declared.

Prohibition officers were to be victims of an alleged plot to lure the sleuths into a house where a moonshine still was to operate in full view. Plans for placing enough dynamite to blow the house to bits when the agents entered the home, had been made in the alleged scheme.

The home of Chief of Police Snider, of Fairmont, W. Va., had also been marked for "construction." The consideration, Chief Wolfe said, was to dynamite the home.

The manner in which information against prisoners had been obtained, was not made public. Clarksburg police authorities, however, declared they had positive statements from the lips of enemies of the arrested men which solved more than a dozen murders.

KIDNAPING PLOT
A statement given officials also alleged the existence of a plot to kidnap the child of Angelo Grant-eno, wealthy Clarksburg merchant.
An ear was to be cut off the child and mailed the father, with the statement that other members would be seized unless a sum of money was sent the black hand.
Granteno's store was wrecked in an explosion of dynamite more than a year ago. Arrest of the nine men explains the blast, Wolfe declared.

How American girls were kept in white slavery by the Mafia under threats of death was explained in one of the statements, the contents of which was not revealed.

Specific charges of murder have been laid against all nine men for the death of James Papara, Clarksburg department store owner, who was shot in his store on the night of January 20.

The names of the arrested men follow:
Angelo Bobo, Fairmont, W. Va., Patsy Carba, Baltimore, Md.
Richard Perri, Fairmont, W. Va.,
Augustus Jergo, Clarksburg, W.
Va., Phillip Ganezaro, Clarksburg, W.
Va., Nicholas Salamandi, Fairmont, W.
Va.,
Joe Sargi, Fairmont, W. Va.,
Philip Mische, Fairmont, W.
Va.,
John Cennelle, Clarksburg, W. Va.

BUILDING ON
W. HIGH-ST
MAY BE SOLD

Tentative Offer for Structure
Is Received by the City

WORTH BIG PRICE

Public Sentiment Will Determine Action, Cuningham Declares

Possibility of a new city building, located in the center of the Public Square, to house the majority of the city departments, appeared bright Saturday, following announcement by Mayor Harold Cunningham that the city commission had been approached regarding its attitude as to the sale of the present building on
W. High-st.

It has been known for several months that certain reputable business interests were interested in purchasing the present city building which is dilapidated and considered a fire trap. No offers had been made and it was only during the last week that a representative of the interested interests approached the commission to ascertain whether the building could be purchased, provided the city received an offer which would justify disposing of the property.

The reason given for the proposal to buy the site is that the lot, which is 100 by 50 feet, is one of the most valuable in the business district and that it is not at the present time producing income as great as if the site was in the hands of private owners, who would erect a new building representing economic waste.

At the present time, the city building represents an economic waste which would be obliterated, should the city sell its present home and secure quarters in some section, not so valuable from a mercantile standpoint, or should a new building be erected in the square, it is pointed out.

In discussing the tentative offer, Cunningham declared that as every word citizen had been given, a public opinion had been ascertained, and that in event of a direct offer being made, the public would be invited to present its views of the proposed sale to the commission in regular meeting.

Several years ago the city received an offer for the city building, but public opinion was against the sale and the idea was dropped.

The city commission, Cunningham asserted, has quietly been endeavoring to obtain a correct idea as to the value of the present building, which was erected 40 years ago, and figures given various members of the commission, place the value of the structure and site at from $125,000 to $150,000 per front foot. This would bring the price received by the city to at least $125,000 and in all probability more, Cunningham asserted.

A survey of members of the commission showed that they considered that the city would be benefited by selling the building but all agreed that no action should be taken until the public had been given a good chance to express his views of the project and that the commission would abide by the decision of the majority.

The income received by the city from portions of the building is very small, according to Cunningham.
The stores on the ground floor of the building are occupied at the present time by sub-tenants who pay high rents, but the original leases were made several years ago, and the city does not receive the full rental value of the location. Lodges which occupy rooms on the third floor of the hall pay very small rents, it was said.

THREE COURSES ARE OPEN
In event the sale of the city building is consummated, three courses will be open to the city commission 1—The Safety-bldg on E. High-st., could be remodeled to house offices.

2—A new building could be erected on one of several available locations, where land values are not so high.

3—The city could erect a building in the center of the square, which would house the majority of the city departments, and which would bring the civic center of the community into the most accessible spot in Lima.

The city commission is favorable to the third plan, Cunningham declared, but before any move in this direction would be taken, public opinion would be taken into consideration.

While the proposed building on the square exists at the present time only in the minds of far-sighted persons, discussions at various times during the past few weeks have suggested that restoration of the old city would be a good idea. A located the ground floor of the building. Fire and police depart-

POLICE SEARCH FOR DIARY OF HATE AUTHOR

CHICAGO — Police started a nation-wide search Saturday night for Mrs. Lucille Kavanagh, author of the "diary of hate" who fled after being released on bond following the fatal shooting of her husband here.

Mrs. Kavanagh shot and killed her wealthy husband, Patrick Henry Kavanagh in his downtown office during a quarrel over money, police declared. Kavanagh did not die until several days later and in the meantime Mrs. Kavanagh was released on bond and disappeared.
Police found a diary among her possessions in which were many statements which indicated she had adopted the philosophy of "hate for the male."

Attorneys for Mrs. Kavanagh declared she would return in time for the inquest next Saturday.
Police, however, believed she had fled.

FLU EPIDEMIC IS DYING OUT

OHIO STATE HEALTH DEPARTMENT Reports On Disease

COLUMBUS — (United Press) —
The influenza epidemic in Ohio is dying out, state health department announced Saturday night.

Low school attendance is attributed to pupils staying home with exposure rather than to large numbers actually afflicted with the disease.

The state is well supplied with physicians, Dr. McGee, director said.

Conditions in Perry-co, where 12 persons died of influenza or pneumonia, after influenza in the last two weeks, are improved the statement said. Santosy, Perry-co, nursing community, whose residents petitioned the health department for aid during the worst of the epidemic, now has a resident physician.

The number of fatalities and cases of influenza, while twice as large as last year, are far below the figures set in 1918, and 19, according to the department's statistics.

SITUATION AT CINCINNATI
CINCINNATI — (United Press) —
Health department officials Saturday night expressed the belief the influenza wave had reached its peak
here.

Sixty-six persons died of influenza and pneumonia during the week

HUGHES HELD AT CAPITAL
BY SITUATION

Secretary of State Abandons Contemplated Visit to South America

READY FOR ACTION

American Foreign Policy Involved In Ruhr and Near East Disputes

(BY A. J. BRADFORD)

WASHINGTON — (United Press) —
The serious international situation has forced Secretary of State Hughes to abandon a contemplated visit to the bigger countries of South America, the United Press learned Saturday night.

Hughes feels that the grave European situation involving American foreign policy will make it necessary for him to remain in the capital.

Virtual notification to this effect has already been given by the secretary to the Latin-American ambassadors and ministers in Washington.

At the last meeting of the governing board of the Pan-American Union, the board made up of the Latin-American diplomatic representatives here, Hughes made this statement in reply to an address by Ambassador Alcidear of Brazil, stressing the significance of the secretary's proposed trip.

HUGHES STATEMENT
"My only concern is that in view of the exigencies that obtain at this time and any delay for the next few weeks might not be possible on the part of the secretary."

The underlying importance of the development that Hughes probably will not make the trip as seen by observers here is the indication that some change has come, or is expected in the situation abroad that may open the way for the United States again to offer its aid to bring about a settlement of the crisis in the old world.

It is noted that Hughes in his statement to the Latin-American diplomats did not explain the nature of the "exigencies that obtain at this time and may obtain for the next few weeks."

However, it is believed that this referred to one of the two foreign questions or possibly in a measure to both.

1—The dangerous situation brought about by the French occupation of the Ruhr.

2—The war cloud hovering over the Near East where any moment may see an overt act that would cause outbreak of hostilities. The United States with the delicate question before it of arranging a separate treaty with the Turks is vivly interested in the situation.

RIOTS IN GERMANY
BERLIN — (United Press) — Demonstrations of revolt against a virtual state of French annexation, were staged by inhabitants of the Ruhr on Friday and extended the occupied zone Saturday.

Dispatches from Bochum said that two French soldiers, alleged to have insulted German postmen, were disarmed by crowds and one of them seriously stabbed.

Young Germans who attacked a Heine cafe which served food to French officers, were driven off by French troops who increased patrols in the city.

Many of the youthful demonstrators were arrested.

The disturbances were simultaneous with word received here from Dusseldorf that the French were extending their advance from the neighborhood of Elberfeld and Lenneps toward Cologne.

Even dispatches announced that the French had issued orders requisitioning housing accommodations for an entire troop division which will arrive shortly. Activities of the French kept the occupied area stirred with mutterings from the stole Westphalians. French aviators flew low over the Essen area, photographing coal mines.

CROWDS AROUSED
Temper of crowds in Berlin streets was aroused by the death of Zeldebory of a German official named Stammering, who was expelled from the occupied zone despite a plea of illness.

French troops arrested Herr Hoppstetter, German mine director in Bochum and employees in his mines immediately struck until Tuesday, according to reports from that town Saturday.

At Oberhausen, the burgomaster was arrested and handcuffed when he refused to deliver hay and straw to the French.

Violence arrests in newly occupied territory were reported. Railroad tracks near Schornborn were torn up, further disrupting traffic.

Coal trains resumed operations to Italy Saturday however.
At Mayence, according to reports, the French arrested 13 railroad pay-masters who were paying workers.
Sixty-one million marks were confiscated.

President Ebert will go to Karlsruhe Monday to discuss the situation at Osnaburg and Appenweiser

QUILNA THEATRE ANNOUNCES TWO PRETENTIOUS OFFERINGS

PRODUCERS' BEST TO BE SEEN HERE

"Trifling Women" and "The Forgotten Law"—Wallace Reid's Last Picture

THE Quilna theatre announces two pretentious feature pictures for this week in "Trifling Women" and "The Forgotten Law" as well as several added features of interest.

"Trifling Women," which opens a four day engagement today is one of the really important pictures of the season. It is the most recent work of Rex Ingram, whose "Prisoner of Zenda" and "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" have made him a world figure among master producers. "Trifling Women" is a modern story of intense human interest. Produced in the most lavish manner and with a cast that contains the three outstanding figures in Mr. Ingram's "Prisoner of Zenda"—Ramon Navarro, Barbara La Marr, and Lewis Stone, it is little wonder that the piece has taken its place alongside of the great pictures of the time. On its initial presentation at the Astor theatre, New York, last fall, with the new theatrical attractions for competition, "Trifling Women" had a phenomenal run and its engagement all over the country have been a succession of triumphs. Young Navarro, who leaped into instant fame by his remarkable portrayal of Ruyter of Hontzen in "The Prisoner of Zenda," has many more opportunities in this new picture and firmly establishes himself as the most engaging romantic actor on the screen. Miss La Marr, recently seen in "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "Quincy Adams Sawyer" to advantage, also has greater scope in "Trifling Women," which her extreme beauty and dramatic powers greatly enhance.

"Trifling Women" will be accompanied by the Quilna News, Aesop Fables and special feature. It should be noted that on account of the length of the program the performances will start at 1, 3, 5, 7, and 9 p. m.

"The Forgotten Law," which comes to the Quilna next Thursday is also blessed with attractive players in the leading roles, for the names of Milton Sills, Cleo Ridgely and Jack Stullhand stand very high in the estimation of devotees of the film. They will be found doing their very best in this impressive picture, which is an adaptation of the screen from the novel, "A Modern Madonna," by Caroline Abbott Stanley. There are four angles to this unusual domestic triangle. Two brothers, the charming wife of one of them and the other woman lead a gripping appeal to the engrossing picture. A fascinating mystery provides another element of surprise in a photoplay that is full of them.

"The Forgotten Law" will be preceded by the Quilna News and Pathe Review. Also special feature.

BILL HOUSE IS HIT AT ORPHEUM

WHEN the curtain rises on the "Midnight Whirl" company featuring jovial Bill House at the New Orpheum theatre, Lima theatre goers will witness what is conceded to be one of the best productions in musical comedy today. This company could only be secured for a one week engagement as they are booked for an extended engagement in the Liberty theatre, Dayton, following the Lima engagement.

Let it be known, altho, Bill House is the featured comedian, he is by no means the whole show. He has surrounded himself with the celebrities of musical comedy. Among some of the well known stage stars supporting Bill House are Gracie Robertson, known as the "Piano Accordion Girl," Tim Ryan, Irene Noble, Ethel Lurgio, Herman Weber, Joe Lurgio and others. In all there are thirty people in the cast of "Midnight Whirl." A Peoria leading paper in reviewing the Bill House show recently printed the following: "Meet Bill House today and enjoy a 300 pound pressure laugh."

Manager Shaw announces three reserved shows today starting promptly at 2:30, 7:30 and 9:15. There will be an entire change of program offered Thursday with another novelty feature, every Thursday night being devoted to some feature.

At the Sigma

TWO of the most popular stars of the screen are reunited again after an exceptionally long estrangement and will be seen together in "The Voice From the Minaret," a First National picture, which is the attraction at the Sigma theatre today and for the remainder of the week. Never in the annals of the film industry have two players appeared in as many productions as have Norma Talmadge and Eugene O'Brien. And at the time of their release the films were so insistently sought after that many were returned for the second showing.

When Joseph M. Schenck obtained the screen rights to "The Voice From the Minaret," he thought of O'Brien as a leading man and finding him available, signed him for the role. These two have won the appellation of "the perfect screen lovers," and motion picture fans everywhere have hailed with delight the news that they would once more have the opportunity to see them together.

A story of the Orient and the desert, "The Voice From the Minaret" holds one spellbound thru its beauty and its dramatic power. It relates the adventuresome romance of a noblewoman and a youth from England, traveling on a pilgrimage thru the deserts and whose love transcends obstacles and difficulties. They are saved from folly by the "voice from the Minaret" but eventually love triumphs—and a thrilling story is brought to a logical and happy ending.

This production is declared to be the best production in which Norma Talmadge has ever appeared and is supported by an excellent cast. Edwin Stevens, who recently died, is also numbered among the players featured in support of Norma and "Gene."

K. P. MINSTRELS AT FAUROT

Everything is in readiness for the presentation of the Pythian Minstrel Follies that will be the attraction at the Faurot theatre Tuesday and Wednesday. Final rehearsals are being held and the production promises to outclass anything previously presented here.

The cast is made up of the very best of local talent and includes such well known performers as Fran Clark, Carl Young, DeMause Leonard, J. W. Beall, James Grubb, Dale Marshall, Berda Ewing and a supporting company of 100 people. The production opens with the regulation Minstrel first part, introducing the "Royal Court at Bagdad" and closes with the big musical comedy, "Oh, You Alec" with Fran Clark in the title role. Among the other numbers on the program are Grace Hollingsworth, a very talented dancer and Bertha Ewing and her Harmony Boys.

Mae Busch recently was injured in an auto accident.

Blanche Sweet is to be starred by Marshall Nelson, her husband, in "Toss of the D'Ubervilles."

BOARD OF 15 WILL DIRECT AUTO CLUB

New Constitution And Bylaws Adopted By Motorists

ELECTION ON FEBRUARY 23

Important Changes Include Increase In Dues

A board of 15 governors, nine of whom will be elected from Lima, will replace the present board of trustees of the Lima Automobile club, the new constitution and bylaws adopted Friday night provide.

The new officers and board elected will serve during 1933. After this year the date of the annual election will be on the third Monday in December.

This innovation was made, Jefferson declared, to give officers a chance to get the club lined up for spring and summer activities during the winter months.

OLD RULES OUTGROWN
The old constitution, which was replaced, had been outgrown by the club. It was adopted 10 years ago when the organization was in its infancy. The new constitution puts the body on an up to the minute basis.

Among the objects for which the organization stands is the promotion of harmony among motorists; to assist in formation of new clubs; to represent national and state associations in furthering the welfare of motorists; construction of good and better roads; dissemination of touring information; legislation to benefit motorists and give information concerning existing laws; elimination of excessive and unreasonable charges to the motoring trade; uniform road marking and protection to the motorist.

Among important changes inaugurated by adoption of the new constitution will be an increase in dues. Old members will pay $7 a year, as heretofore. There will be an initiation fee of $2, however, for new members to pay.

This fee covers the cost of emblems, maps and touring information.

Admission of contributing members at $50 each is also made possible. A number of business firms are already making inquiry concerning membership.

More interest in the seasons activities than ever before is being manifested by club members, it is shown.

JURY AWARDS VERDICT OF $122 TO CHARLES MEYER AGAINST WM. L. RUSSELL

Charles Meyer, president of the Artkraft Sign company, was awarded a $122 verdict in a suit for commissions, against H. G. Russell, by a jury before Judge H. W. Blackly in common pleas court Saturday. Meyer is also accorded back interest on the amount claimed.

Verdict of the jury commenced Friday and lasted the better part of two days, although only three witnesses testified. The case is the third to be tried in a series of suits growing out of the financial affairs of Lima sign manufacturing companies in which Russell has been interested.

Two of the actions have been dismissed in the lower court, because of Russell's failure to give additional security for costs, as a non-resident. They will be prosecuted on error in appeals court, it is understood.

Verdict for charges against R. R. Trubey, assistant prosecuting attorney, is said to have originated from the trouble over finances between Russell and Meyer & Francis.

Trubey was counsel for Meyer in the case decided Saturday and Ben P. Wolty, former congressman, who instituted the original charges against Trubey, was in court as local representative for Russell.

OVERCOME BY GAS FUMES. WOMAN IS RECOVERING

Miss Mary Hart, 40, of 126 W. McKibben-st., overcome by natural gas fumes Friday in her home attending to her household duties was taken to hospital Saturday afternoon. Attending physicians stated she had entirely recovered from the effects of the gas fumes.

She had been removed to St. Rita's in an unconscious condition. Several hours later she was revived.

DELPHOS CATHOLICS TO HONOR REV. BURKHARDT

Societies of St. John's Catholic church, Delphos, plan a reception for Rev. Urban Burkhardt, assistant priest, who leaves Tuesday for his new charge at Shelby Settlement.

The reception will be given in the Knights of Columbus club rooms. Father Burkhardt will be made the recipient of a gift.

A successful, Rev. Albert Bishop, Sandusky, is expected to arrive in Delphos soon.

RELIEF CORPS WILL HOLD RECEPTION, FEBRUARY 22

Women's Relief corps will hold a Martha Washington reception, afternoon and evening, February 22, at Memorial Hall.

Those taking part will be attired in the costumes of the days of Martha Washington.

JAILED FOR FAILURE TO SUPPORT FATHER, 106

CHICAGO—Samuel Fine, a fish peddler, was given 30 days in the county jail for failure to support his father, Hunya Fine, 106 years old.

Fine told the court he was unable to contribute to the care of the old man although his sister-in-law told the court he could pay $12 a week if the court would order it.

EXPLAINS 32 YEARS' PEACE IN INDUSTRY

CINCINNATI, — Conciliation is the secret of industrial tranquility, according to Joseph H. Valentine, head of the International Molders Union of North America since 1903.

Not in all branches of the molders' trade but among the stove-molders, of whom there are 9,000 to 10,000 employed in the United States and Canada, industrial peace has prevailed, so far as matters of a any importance are concerned.

Valentine says, "Annual meetings," he explains, "are held, at which employers and employees meet and thrash out all differences. If displeased for the moment we withdraw for a few days. When we come back we feel better."

Underhand dealings, Valentine adds, must be avoided on both sides. "And there would be fewer strikes in other industries," he comments, "if each side would tell the other the whole truth, and not attempt tricks by holding something up its sleeve."

Valentine refers to arbitration as "the bunk," declaring that it never holds satisfactorily, the decision of an outside man invariably leaving something to be desired, in comparison with "an agreement reached directly between the parties involved."

MAY BREAK TRUCE IN PAVING WAR

"Surprise" Intimated By Member of Delphos Council

If council observes an amendment offered by Councilman John Lehnkuhle to a motion made January 23 by Frank Peiffer to table paving ordinances for S. Main, S. Pierce and Cleveland-sts., no move will be made at the next meeting Tuesday night in the Delphos paving war.

When time was ripe for second reading of three ordinances repealing former legislation which removed "teeth" from legal steps in the matter, Peiffer moved at the last meeting to postpone action, to allow time for consideration.

Lehnkuhle's idea of offering the amendment, he said Saturday, was to give property owners ample time to become acquainted with the procedure. Under the amendment, if strictly observed, it will be impossible for council to proceed Tuesday night, but it may go on record as favoring further action and adopt the ordinance at the next meeting, February 27.

It was intimated Saturday by Councilman Peiffer, however, that a "surprise" will be sprung Tuesday night which will act as a boom-erang on property owners who have been active in advocating postponement until 1931.

The nature of the move was not disclosed by Peiffer, but he intimated it concerns the financing of the triple project.

Present tendency among officials favors closing of the war by not opening it at council meetings in the near future, it is declared.

Service Director Ed Spelman, who reiterated previous statements of the board of control that it did not re-open the subject and that council was entirely responsible, declared Saturday he is in favor of clamping on the lid permanently.

PUTNAM-CO. SHERIFF IS SEEKING DOG CATCHER

The new sheriff of Putnam-co., Roy N. McCullough, of Gilboa, is seeking the services of a professional dog catcher. The county auditor reported that 2,000 dogs are at large throughout having been supplied with tags by their owners, as required by law.

It's up to the sheriff to catch 'em, but he'd rather delegate the job to another. He's awaiting application, it is stated.

MAN FOUND DEAD IS HEART TROUBLE VICTIM

Heart trouble was given as the cause of the death of John S. Myers, 76, of 739 W. High-st., who was found dead in the DeVosco garage, E. North-st., Saturday noon. Myers was an employee of the garage. He was formerly an engineer in the Pennsylvania Railroad yards. He is survived by his wife.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

DRIVE IS RENEWED FOR DELPHOS LEGION MEMBERS

Re-signing of members for Commemorative Post, Delphos American Legion, for 1933 has begun. Each year a new enrollment is made.

Special efforts are being put forth because of possibility of securing a portion of the $15,000 fund formerly belonging to the Eighty-Third Division. A recent court ruling directs that a fund, collected during the late war, be distributed among Legion posts of the state.

DELPHOS WILL OBSERVE LINCOLN'S ANNIVERSARY

Business will be only partially suspended Monday in Delphos, in observance of Abraham Lincoln's birthday.

GAS FUME DEATHS STIR OFFICIALS

Conference Called To Be Held Tuesday In Columbus

THREE NEAR DEATH AT ADA

Sixty Perish In Ohio During Past Three Months

Tragedies which occurred in Columbus during the past week, due to carbon monoxide gas, following similar incidents in other parts of Ohio during the winter, and the near death of three students at Ada, Thursday night, has spurred federal and state officials to action in taking steps to prevent further fatalities.

George McElroy, Charles Peterson and Harvey Gallant, eighth grade students in the Ada public schools, were found lying on the floor of the gymnasium at the high school, unconscious, from inhaling carbon monoxide gas, the result of a pipe leading into the shower bath heaters becoming clogged and throwing fumes into the bath rooms.

CONFERENCE PLANNED
A conference of federal and state officials and others interested will be held in Columbus Tuesday.

Dr. John E. Mosker, health director, said arrangements for the conference were perfected by the committee on fundamentals of gas burning devices organized by the health department.

"Three score persons have perished from carbon monoxide poisoning in Ohio in the last three months," Dr. Mosker said.

"Certainly such a situation calls for drastic action immediately. The conference is wholly official, as representing the state of Ohio." Chief topics to be considered by the conference include:

- 1.—Fueling of all gas stoves and water heaters.
- 2.—State supervision or approval of all installations of heating devices.
- 3.—Physicians reports of diseases and deaths resulting from improper combustion in heating devices.

Cooperating in the organization and work of the conference are Ohio State University, division of factory inspection, state fire marshal, United States bureau of standards, United States bureau of mines and representatives of gas and stove interests.

ments, also on the ground floor, could be located at the most strategic point in Lima.

City offices could be located on upper floor. The building might house various federal departments, such as the proposed federal court, in event Lima does not obtain a new post office building.

Additional space in the building could be leased for offices.

And one of the most important features in connection with the building in the square, is that the site would be obtained at no cost.

The course of the city commission will be aided entirely by the opinion of the citizens, Cunningham asserted at the closing of the interview, also at the present time, the city commission is favorable to selling the present structure and erecting a new modern, up-to-date building on the square.

BUDGET IS BACKED BY HARDING

Declares The System Shall Not Be Destroyed

WASHINGTON—(United Press)—President Harding has come to the rescue of the budget system and will not permit it to be destroyed by the votes of the house and senate members.

Mr. Harding has let congressional leaders know that if they will not preserve the budget system from the assaults of "pork barrel" statesmen, he will.

He will decline to permit the spending of the appropriation of $55,000,000 for rivers and harbors, included in the army bill, he has let congress know, and will keep army engineers to the limit set by the budget bureau—$27,000,000.

The president, congressional leaders said, has power to do this, even though congress appropriate the larger amount. They protest that he preserve the integrity of the budget plan that way, rather than by vetoing the army bill and making an extra session of congress imminent.

The budget system is regarded by all Republicans as one of the accomplishments of this administration.

It was set up to prevent "pork" raids on the treasury. But in the river and harbor item of the army bill, the house boosted the budget figures from $27,000,000 to $56,000,000. This, President Harding feels, is a serious step, because it was done by the votes of Republicans as well as Democrats.

The Republicans in the houses flouted the very agency they set up to protect the treasury, he holds. The president may ask the next congress to pass the Madden resolution, giving him power to veto part of a bill and approve the remainder.

If he had that power, he would veto the river and harbor item, he has told leaders, and approve the appropriation for general support of the war department.

"JULIUS CAESAR" MOVIE AS BENEFIT AT DELPHOS

Lovers of the classical drama will have an opportunity to witness the screen version of Shakespeare's play, "Julius Caesar," Friday night at Jefferson auditorium, Delphos.

The picture is reputed the best put out by the University of Wisconsin. Funds will be used to install a radio outfit at Jefferson high school. Part of the equipment has already been erected to provide entertainment in the auditorium.

SHAWNEE-TIP MAN DIES; WAS NATIVE OF ENGLAND

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 10 a. m. at Woodlawn chapel, internment in Woodlawn cemetery.

CHANGE IN SCHEDULE OF "Y. M." GYM CLASSES

Change in the schedule of the gymnasium classes of the Y. W. C. A. has shifted the hours of the new matrons' class which was started recently.

Hereafter, the class will meet Tuesday and Thursday mornings from 9 to 10 o'clock. The old hours were Monday and Wednesday, from 9:30 to 10:30 a. m.

ROY BARNHART WILL ADDRESS ROTARIANS

Members of the Rotary club will be addressed by Roy Barnhardt, local home salesman, at their regular meeting to be held Monday night at the Norval Hotel.

Barnhardt has been scheduled to appear at different times on the Rotary program, but has been forced to cancel his engagement each time.

The event is sponsored by Trinity M. E. church choir.

HUGHES HELD AT WASHINGTON

with local government authorities. GERMAN CHIEFS BARRED PARIS—(United Press)—France and Belgium Saturday barred high German officials from the Ruhr.

The two governments, in a note to Berlin, informed the Germans that the occupied zones are "forbidden ground."

Chancellor Cuno's recent visit to the Ruhr caused unrest and excitement among inhabitants, the note said, and the order includes all cabinet officers and ministers of the German government.

General Degoutte was placed in supreme military command of the Ruhr region following a conference Saturday between Foreign Minister Jaspard of Belgium and Premier Poincare, France.

General Maginot attended the meeting and it was announced that the French and Belgians had reached full accord on the policy to be pursued. Problems that arise in the future will be settled by conferences at Brussels or Paris.

French and Belgian workers will be substituted for German railroad, postal, telegraph, telephone and customs employees in event of a general strike, it was said here.

Going! Going! Gone!—Sold for $500.

Former Common Pleas Judge William Kilmer, auctioneer, banged his hammer down and knocked off the West Cairo Lutheran church for the sum named.

The building, grounds and fixtures were included, even to the pulpit and pews. Nothing was reserved. Milton Snider, farmer living near West Cairo, bid in the property. The price paid is approximately the value of the lot. The purchaser does not exactly know for what purpose he will use the property.

Sale was authorized by Judge Fred C. Becker in common pleas court recently, on application of the trustees. The proceeds will go to the Ohio synod treasury.

Members of the congregation will affiliate with Lima churches of similar faith. The sale was held at the church.

Only a few prospective purchasers were present.

REVOLT IN ITALY IS FEARED

Evidence Of Plotting Against Present Regime Discovered

ROME—(United Press)—A revolution is breaking against the Fascist government of Italy. Officials of the Mussolini administration believe.

Evidence of plotting against the present regime are found on every side, it was stated authoritatively Saturday night as reports reached the cabinet of arrests and raids in many cities that disclosed "red" machinations.

In Florence 19 bombs, two exploding tubes and hundreds of rifles and thousands of rounds of ammunition were among the day's haul made by Fascist police. Prominent Socialist was arrested at Collecchio. Trieste newspapers announced Saturday evening that a soviet revolutionary body has selected that city as headquarters for spread of revolutionary propaganda in Italy, with the object of overthrowing the Fascist government.

Documents seized in a raid Saturday upon offices of a communist daily, included two manifestos, one to the Italian proletariat, the other to the Slav population, inciting attacks against the Fascists.

Soviet Russia may be behind the Thursday uprising, some officials say, for evidence has been discovered that the soviet government has furnished Signor Bordiga, political secretary of the communist paper, with funds thru women spies. Bordiga was arrested at Rome.

The three were forced to jump when the explosion occurred and the car suddenly burst into flames.

The car is a mass of twisted steel, nothing being left but the trucks and framework.

OVERHEAD TANGLE CONTINUES

County Surveyor Still Opposed To Air Route

WILL ISSUE STATEMENT

City, Rail Officials Against Tunnel Plan

Controversy between railroad, county and city officials over the question of tunneling under or bridging over L. E. & W. Railroad tracks at Metcalf-st, is still in status quo, it was learned Saturday.

This means that C. A. Bingham, city manager, railroad engineers and others still are in favor of an overhead, while Walter R. Toy, county surveyor, holds firm for digging beneath the tracks.

Seemingly the city and railroad men have the pat hand. But Toy claims to hold a couple of aces, which may be played when the proper time comes.

He announced Saturday he intends issuing a statement concerning his position during the coming week.

TOY'S POSITION
"The city and the railroad can go ahead if they like," Toy declared, "but when it comes to the expenditure of county money, the law must be followed. Even the court must follow the statutes."

All county improvements, the Ohio law provides, must be made by contract, awarded by the county commissioners and approved by the county surveyor.

Thus far there has been no suggestion made by anyone as to what part of the project the county is to build.

Contracts for steel are said to have been let by the railroad company to the American Bridge company. Whether the beams will be fabricated in plants in the vicinity of Chicago, or in the Pittsburgh district, has not been stated.

DAYTON QUINTET UPSETS DOPE

WILLIAMS STARS IN SLOW GAME

(BY FRANKLYN DOAN)

Central's basketball team suffering an unusual reversal of form went down to defeat at the hands of Dayton Stivers Saturday night by the score of 31-12.

Off in not only their passing and defensive game, but also in basket shooting, the Long Green dug in with all their strength and as Dayton gradually piled up points, Central increased their fight to no avail.

Their inability to cage the ball caused them to fall way behind in the early moments of the game. Time and again the Central men worked the ball down to their goal only to miss by some piece of hard luck.

During the first half Central's defensive game was strong but the offense still failed to function. The fast Dayton forwards were nailed for the last few minutes of the initial half but at the same time their guards stopped the Central forwards.

Central started against the Dayton lads with the dope in their favor. Central had defeated Springfield the night previous and the latter treated Stivers rather roughly a few weeks ago. This Central was favored to win but they could not out the ice.

USED NEW FORMATION
The method of the play by which Stivers was able to overcome the Central lads was a fast triangular formation. Time after time they worked the ball down to their hoop and some Dayton men got a short shot almost invariably.

With but a few minutes to play Central started a spurt that made the Stivers team know they were still alive. Baskets by King and Seeley and a foul goal by Day would have been the starting of a dangerous rally but the gun intervened.

Denny Young, captain of the Stivers grid team, was the star of the winning clan. It seemed at times that he was anxious to start the football season early but he quickly stopped such proceedings. Young was not only the backbone of the Dayton defense but he also contributed two fielders to his team's total.

Central took the lead early. Wolfe scored twenty seconds after the first period about half gone Stivers throw from the center of the floor. However the Dayton bunch started working together and tied the score soon after. Herman put Dayton ahead for the first time when he dribbled half the length of the floor and dunk the pill.

Baskets began to fall in the Stivers goal from all corners. With the first second about half gone Stivers was on the long end 11-2. A time out revived the Central tusslers and they held the Daytonians down to a pair of field goals for the rest of the period.

CENTRAL SPURS
Further scoring on Central's part started here. Seeley followed a field goal and Day followed with two foul throws called on Young for holding. The first half ended a couple of seconds later.

It was a grim and determined Central team that took the floor in the second half. The attempts of the rooters to spur the Long Green were helpless. If the crowd had shown but the fight that the team did the score would have been at least a little closer.

Neither team scored for a long while. After about five minutes of play Herman sank the first score of the second period. The Central bunch was trying many shots but they would not be attracted to the basket.

Stivers gradually worked the score in their favor until it stood 13-3. With only four or five minutes to play two fouls and as many baskets were rung up by the Centralites. The whistle cut short their endeavors, the contest ending 31-13 with the Stivers team on the long end. This made Central's second defeat out of ten starts.

LINEUP AND SUMMARY:
CENTRAL: F. Stivers, G. Wolfe, F. Herman, F. Finner, C. English, G. Welsh, G. Young, G. Burdette.

Field goals: Wolfe, King, Seeley, Bayh, Herman 4, Finner 4, English 3, Welsh 2, Young 2. Substitutions: Bayh 5, Herman 5, Substitutions: Hollister for Burdette for Swisher. King for Wolfe. Boske for Herman. Randy for English. Referee: McNeany. Springfield, Buchanan, Lima.

A six-inch movement of that left arm is generally worth from $2500 to $5000. Think of it. George Chaney is a fighter. A lightweight, respected from the pugilistic scrap heap by that clever little handier, Sammy Harris of Baltimore.

Chaney started life as a bantamweight and did well. He got into the featherweight class and tackled Johnny Kilbane of Cleveland. A lightweight, respected from the pugilistic scrap heap by that clever little handier, Sammy Harris of Baltimore.

Chaney had plenty of money then and life was one sweet song. Little of the singing was done around the training camp. So the fortune went and likewise did Chaney.

Harris got him then, started him going as a heavyweight and a bunch of knockouts soon won back his old popularity. He had learned a lesson —saved his money and took care of himself.

The left arm did the rest. He started knocking them for goals. Once he ran up a string of 14 knockouts.

Last week he whipped Frankie Rice, a young brawler of his own home town. The fight went two minutes, a snappy left, traveling not more than six inches, caught Rice on the "button." He went cold. It was Chaney's eighty-seventh knockout. Of the 87 the good left took care of 77.

Chaney's left arm looks like a heavyweight's. So do his shoulders. He's short and slender of limb. He can make 130 pounds easily.

The knockout star in now 22. He won't quit until he has a hundred kayos to his credit. And he's coming slower and slower for the good lightweight's are afraid of him and promoters won't put him in with bums. The fans are too wise for that.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

One badly pitched ball often loses a ball game.

One badly pitched ball can prove the deciding factor in a world series.

This truth was demonstrated in the 1922 world series between the Yankees and the Giants.

Sometimes the error is mental, more often it is mechanical.

In the second game of the series Bob Shawkey got a curve ball off and inside to Emil Mauer. He hit a home run into the left field bleachers. Two were on at the time. Those three runs were all the Giants made. The game ended in a 3 to 3 tie.

Shawkey knew that such a ball was in Mauer's groove. He had previously fooled him badly on low curves outside. The high pitch was a physical error. Shawkey's arm simply disobeyed the command of his brain.

In the final game with two on the bases and the Yankees leading, Joe Bush and Miller Huggins disagreed over the passing of Young. The manager's say was final. Kelly, a fast ball hitter, was the next at bat. Bush either tried to slip over a fast one, or in anger pitched in Kelly's groove. A single that decided the world series was the result.

Two badly pitched balls had played havoc with the Yankees' chances.

"Waddell had unlimited ability, so much speed that he could buzz his fast one by the batter, while his curve was almost unhitatable. Plank didn't have the stuff of Waddell but he possessed a master brain."

All of which merely proves that it is an easy matter to toss off a ball and throw a couple of badly pitched balls.

In a world series ball game there must be much thought back of every ball pitched, as Eddie Plank remarked.

Eddie Plank once remarked to me: "A world series ball game is different from any other contest, because you must put much thought back of every pitch. You can't take any foolish chances."

Last season, while discussing pitchers with Connie Mack, I asked him who was the greatest left-handed pitcher he had ever seen.

U. S. POLICY PUT ON FUN PROGRAM

Foreign Attitude Portrayed At Gridiron Club Dinner

UNOFFICIAL OBSERVER NAMED

This American Dignitary Called Back Door Diplomat

WASHINGTON.—(United Press).—The trials and tribulations beset

ting the working out of America's foreign policy were portrayed in humorous skits Saturday night at the mid-winter dinner of the Gridiron Club, famous organization of Washington correspondents.

President Harding and scores of other distinguished guests, some of them the targets for satirical shafts, laughed heartily at the limas and antics of characters adapted from the Arabian nights.

Mr. Harding was seen in the wry ridden Caliph.

Dimmed lights and a crashing of symbols heralded the rivals of Herr Em Ali Hassit, knight of the Golden Gridiron commander of the Mirthful and Caliph of Bagdad-on-the-Potomac, with his court. Whozitt, grand viceroy and premier, and minister of affairs, urged on the caliph the formation of a foreign policy and the selection of a head for a bureau of public information and press relations.

Whozitt gave the following reason for his suggestion:

"All successful diplomacy is mysterious. Our foreign policy must be incomprehensible except to ourselves. But we must have open diplomacy so that every one can understand how incomprehensible it is. A press agent is the front doorkeeper of open diplomacy."

Hassan Saidit, was given the job, being qualified because he was born in "Happy Valley, Ohio."

UNOFFICIAL OBSERVER

Next came the appointment of the unofficial observer. All Bla-Bla was selected.

An unofficial observer, it was explained, was "a backdoor diplomat who represents us in company where we would not be seen ourselves."

The unofficial observer prints views communicated to him by his government and then has to cable back explanations for these views.

At this point Senators Borah, Idaho, and Reed, of Missouri, insisted in taking a hand in affairs. Reed charged All Bla-Bla was nothing but a book agent for the League of Nations. Borah announced he was against the foreign policy. Borah was told the policy had not yet been formulated.

"That doesn't make any difference," he replied. "All foreign policies look alike to me."

"In Bad, the sailor, who is minister of the marine and whose last name is Sims" and "Alaskar, possessor of the wonderful lamp," walked in. Alaskar said he had rubbed the lamp and wished for a ship subsidy, but got a bonus instead.

PINCHOT IN SKIT

Governor Pinchot, Pennsylvania, was the subject of one skit.

"What might this be, something allegorical?" inquired one actor at the sight of a chef trying wheat cakes over a gas jet and tossing them in the air.

"No, not allegorical, this is the new method of running an executive office on the Childs-Restaurant-Window-Plan, as is practiced by Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania."

George Harvey, ambassador to Great Britain and his silence on his recent visit to Washington, formed theme for a ditty. The club also rendered a song the president's forthcoming vacation in the south "far from intrigue and senate speeches, far from the donkey's bray."

Members of the cabinet, Governors Pinchot and Sulzer, New Jersey, the Italian ambassador, August Thomas and Will Hays, "czars" of the stage and movies respectively, and other political figures, artists, authors and cartoonists, were guests.

Science Reveals How Glands Control Our Destinies

Just What Makes Us Fat, Tall, Short or Lean and Why Some Become School Teachers and Others Champion Athletes, Explained by Tiny Pockets in Muscles and Brains

An Unusual Father and Son Photograph Showing M. Ratoucheff, the Russian Impresario and His Eldest Son, Andre, Who Is Twenty Years Old, and Twenty-six Inches in Height.

By Dr. I. L. Nascher.

THE explanation of why one human being keeps on growing until he is over eight feet tall while another stops at less than one-third that height has been found in two or three tiny glands hidden away in brain and muscle pockets where medical scientists never before sought them. These and other little glands are revealing to-day the mystery of why one man is fat and another lean, why we are not all professional athletes, college professors or prodigies, and why some of us are considered more handsome than our less gifted relatives.

The ancient anatomists knew that there were certain organs in the body which made substances that were carried through ducts or channels to other parts of the body. The liver, for example, made bile or gall, which was carried, first, to the gall bladder, and thence through the bile duct to aid digestion. The salivary glands made saliva, which was carried through several ducts to the mouth. The ancient knew, too, that there were other glands that had no ducts, and their secretions went directly into the blood.

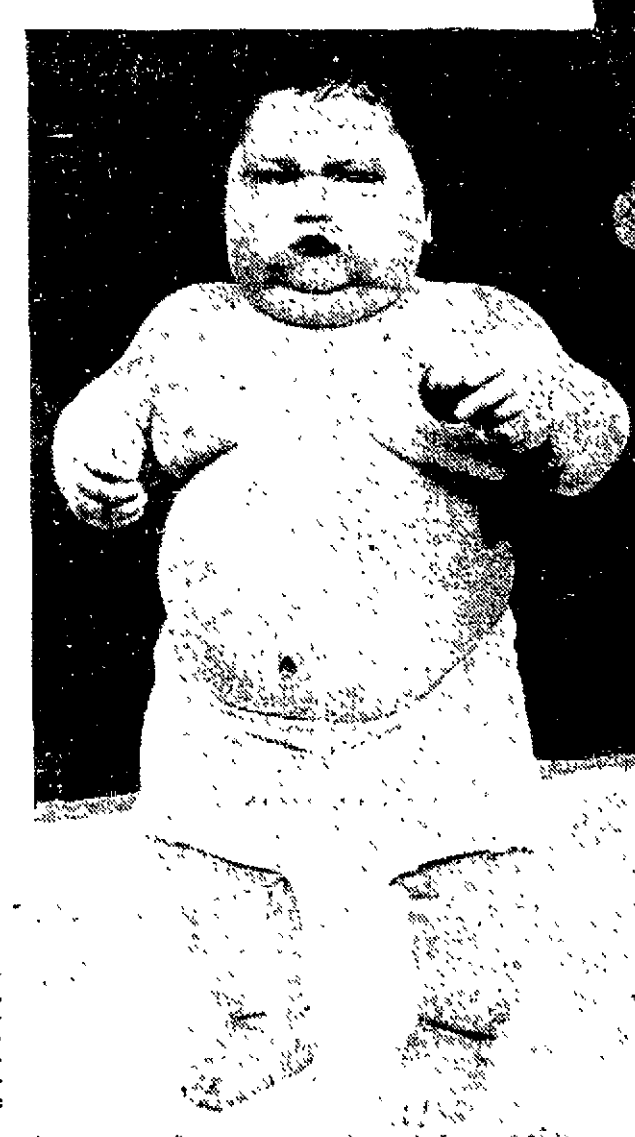

Not until recent years did physiologists begin experimenting with the ductless glands to discover what substances they secreted and what these substances did in the body. They experimented with the thyroid gland, the large gland in the front part of the throat, and found that if this gland was diseased or partially removed the person became fat, sluggish and dull. If, on the other hand, thyroid gland substance was administered to a fat person, that person would become thin, active and mentally brighter.

With these effects before them, the physiologists built up a theory that thyroid secretion oxidized or burnt up in the body the excess of fat that the body could not use, and experiments verified the theory. In like manner they next experimented with other glands, and found that the thymus gland, which is also in the throat, but below the thyroid, controls bone growth during the growing period; that the pituitary glands—two glands lying on the under surface of the brain—control general growth of the body, and that the pineal gland, which is also in the brain, has some influence upon the growth of certain parts of the body during the period of growth. They found, too, that in health these glands regulate and control certain functions of the body and also regulate and control each other. In disease, however, the perfect relationship between the glands is lost and one or more glands act independently of the others.

We know now that excessive fatness or leanness, tallness or shortness, or other differences in bulk or stature, is due to abnormal action of one or more of the glands controlling growth. In other words, these are gland diseases some of which might be prevented if treated in time.

General body growth, it has been discovered, depends upon the secretion from the pituitary glands. If this secretion is excessive, the individual becomes a midget. There is a difference between a midget and a dwarf. In the case of the midget the whole body is small but proportionately developed. Major Dot, Barnum's famous midget, was perfectly proportioned, although he was less than forty inches high. The German Lilliputians and the Bosso Brothers were midgets. In the case of the dwarf, the body trunk and head are normal, but the extremities are short. This is not the fault of the pituitary glands, but the thymus gland, which controls bone growth. There is a deficiency in the secretion of this gland. The organs grow normally since the pituitary is normal, and the bones covering the organs grow normally. As if by a mutual understanding between the normal pituitary and the defective thymus gland, the latter supplies enough secretion to insure normal bone growth where bones are required to cover and protect organs, as the skull, chest and pelvis, and the deficiency of the thymus secretion is felt in the bones of the extremities which are not required to cover essential organs.

These bones remain small, and the weight of the body upon the lower extremities tends to compress the bones of the lower limbs and make them still smaller. Thus the dwarf is a man with full-sized head and trunk, but with short, thick legs, and arms somewhat shorter than usual. Excessive growth, producing the giant, is called gigantism, and the condition of the pituitary gland which produces gigantism is called hyperpituitarism. There are, however, giants whose bodies and heads are of normal size, but they have very long legs and arms. In these cases there is no hyperpituitarism, but an excess of thymus gland secretion or hyperthymism. The circus giants of this type are comparatively thin, and their heads and bodies appear ridiculously small. Usually when there is an excess of pituitary secretion there is also an excess of thymus secretion. Where there is at the same time a hyperthyroidism the giant skeleton is produced. In the perfectly proportioned giant, such as Captain Bates, Barnum's giant, and Chang, the Chinese giant, there is hyperpituitarism and a hyperthymism to correspond with the other, but the thyroid secretion is normal.

Just as an excess of pituitary and thymus secretions are responsible for excessive growth, so a diminished secretion from these glands causes deficient growth and stature. The fatness or leanness of the individual depends upon the secretion of the thyroid gland. In the heavy, fat dwarf of the Bignola type, there is a deficiency of thymus and thyroid secretions and the pituitary gland is normal, while in General Tom Thumb there was a marked deficiency of pituitary and thymus, while the thyroid was but slightly deficient.

The parathyroid glands, lying at the side of the thyroid, control the deposit of lime in the system, and we know that in certain diseases due to a deficiency of lime the introduction into the body of parathyroid substance will relieve these diseases. Bow legs, knock knees, funnel chest, chicken breast are all forms of rickets which is due to insufficient lime in the bones, and a deficiency of parathyroid secretion is responsible for this condition.

The thymus gland begins to waste during childhood, and by the twentieth or twenty-fifth year it has wasted away completely. There is, then, no further normal bone growth, and the individual has reached his complete height.

While we know what makes the giant tall and the midget and the dwarf small, the living skeleton thin and the fat man fat, we don't know yet how to reduce the secretions from the glands that produce the giant and the living skeleton.

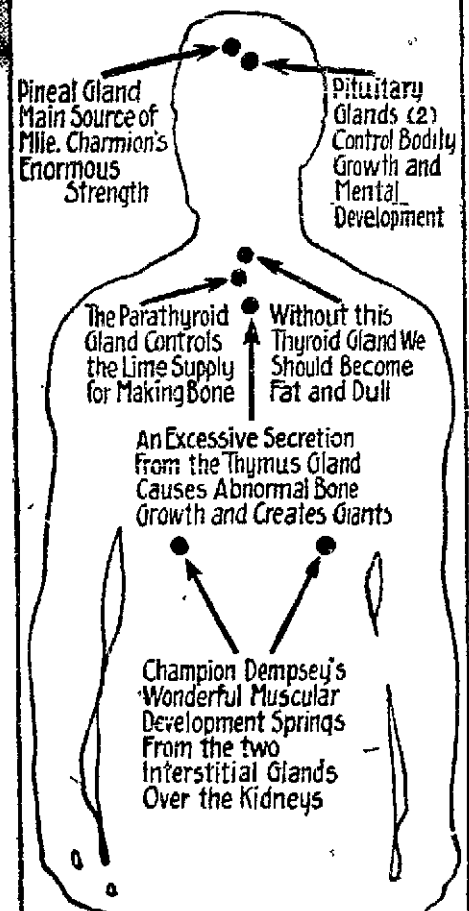

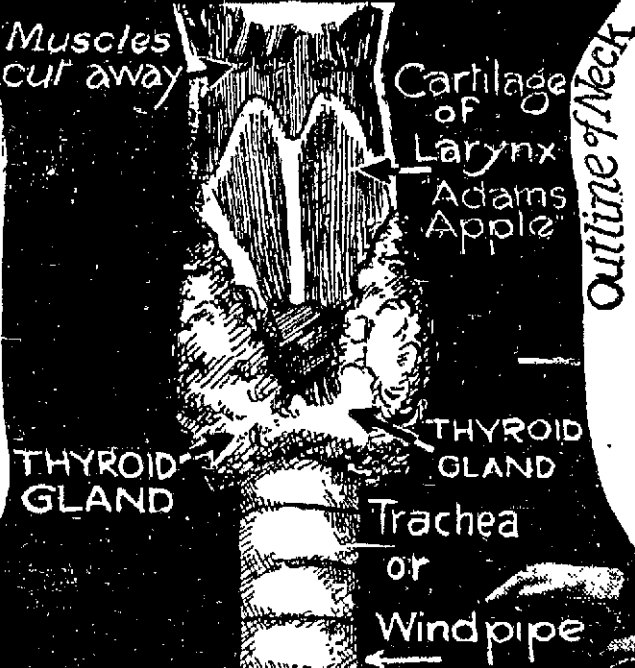

Chart Showing Relative Positions of the Important Glands That Promote or Retard Bodily Growth and Physical and Mental Development.

period. Deficient secretions can be replaced or the glands producing these secretions can be given throughout the growing period to overcome the natural deficiency in that individual. The great difficulty is in determining just what secretions are insufficient and how much, and what will happen to other glands if we give the missing secretions.

"One morning I got a tip there had been a murder at Xenia. I queried my papers and 10 of them ordered stories. Then I and the correspondent of a Cincinnati paper hired a livery rig and drove to Pennville for the story."

"It proved to be a suicide instead of a murder, but there was a story in it and I filed to all the papers."

"When I was making up my string at the end of the month, I was confronted by this dilemma.
The other newspaperman and I had paid $5 for the livery rig, splitting it $2.50 each way."

"If I prorated that among the 10 papers to which I sent the story it would make an item for livery here at 25 cents each, which on its face would appear absurd. If I entered it at $2.50 it would be open admission that I had split expenses with some other correspondent. For $5 would be recognized as the probable and reasonable livery charge for a drive to Xenia."

"So I added a charge of $5 for livery here to my bill to each of the 10 papers. And every one of them paid it!"

When the Police Raided the Billion-Dollar Ball

"Who Asked You to Protect Us?" Demanded the Ultra Folks, Who Just Loved the Thrill of Being Victims of Short-Change and Bunco Artists

Left to Right, Dorothy Stuart, Kathryn Hull, Alida Plunkett and Helen Jenkins, Charming Society Debs Who Helped to Decorate the Astor Ballroom for the Billion Dollar Affair by Stringing Balloons.

SHERIFF SHEP PLUNKETT, of Cornbelt County, who stopped the wheel of fortune at the country fair and saved the native from those slick city fellers, hasn't got a thing on Sergeant Cahill and Detective Murphy, of New York City's finest.

Sergeant Cahill and Detective Murphy got a tip that a city slicker from New Haven, Conn., had slipped into New York and set up a wheel of fortune at society's "billion-dollar ball," and was taking away the money of a lot of innocent plutocrats at fifty and a hundred dollars a whirl.

So Sergeant Cahill and Detective Murphy stepped right up to the Hotel Astor and flashed their badges. They found scores of unprotected, gullible millionaires gaping about the wheel. The poor victims were trying to win kewpie dolls. They were paying eight and ten dollars apiece for paddles with numbers on them. Whenever a millionaire held a winning paddle he would go dashing off to a debutante with the doll as though he had cornered wheat or something. The women were egging on the men to lose their money. It was pitiful!

Sergeant Cahill and Detective Murphy acted at once. Probably they said indignantly to one another, "Our millionaires must be protected at all costs! Some of them may lose as much as the price of a new polo pony if this keeps up; let us arrest this Johnny Bates!"

That's what they did. They took Johnny to jail and made him put up $100 bond. And then they sat back with glowing faces and righteous hearts to await society's overwhelming congratulations and tears of gratitude.

But society was curiously ungrateful. Instead, it was indignant. Its spokesman, Laurence Driggs, chairman of the ball committee, said, "This is an outrage! Is it gambling for Vincent Astor or Otto Kahn or any of our wealthy patrons to take a chance on a kewpie doll? And if it is gambling, what of it? All the money was going to the cause."

And then Mr. Driggs explained that the police had raided—"raided" as though it was a honky-tonk carnival!—the "ace" event of the New York social season; nothing less than the Fifth Annual Aviators' Ball, given for the benefit of the New York Flying Corps.

The ball had been planned as the most brilliant of them all. It more than fulfilled expectations. The list of patrons included such social, literary, artistic, civil and military luminaries as Vincent Astor, Otto H. Kahn, Ogden Reid, T. J. Oakley Rhineland, Frank Crowninshield, Porter Emerson Brown, Royal Cortissoz, Kernell Roosevelt, Rear-Admiral Sims, Rockwell Kent, Conde Nast and dozens of others.

Among the patronesses were Mrs. Goodhue Livingston, Mrs. Jay Gould, Mrs. Thomas W. Lamont, Mrs. John Aspengren, Mrs. George D. Widener, Mrs. T. J. Oakley Rhineland, Mrs. Otto H. Kahn, Mrs.

Hoyle, Mrs. Gouverneur Morris, Mrs. and Mr. Stettinius and half a hundred magic names.

Vincent Astor was there in a box. The debutantes turned out in regiments. Major-General Bullard and his staff attended. So did Prince Casati, General Lester, Adjutant-General Kincaid and Admiral Plunkett. It was altogether a most imposing event—and all for sweet charity's sake.

Never had the Astor ballroom been more lavishly decorated. Flags of all nations fluttered from pillars and ceiling. Insignia of famous overseas flying squadrons adorned the boxes. Over the waving mob of dancers bubbled and drifted thousands of toy balloons in every color of the rainbow. And around the sides of the room were the games.

The games, Mr. Driggs frankly admits, might very well be termed games of chance in some instances. There was "ring-toss" and "chuck-a-luck" and all the old favorites of midways and fairgrounds and circus lots for years past. And there was the wheel of fortune. Somehow the wheel of fortune seemed to strike the fancy of the millionaires more than any other booth.

Perhaps, to some of them, it was reminiscent of Monte Carlo. It didn't look unlike a roulette wheel. And in that throng were many who had wagered thousands at Monte Carlo, lost them on the single flip of a card, won them back, and indifferently pitched the profits to a partner. These crowded excitedly about the wheel of fortune, buying the numbered paddles with more zest than they ever displayed over a stack of ivory counters.

Perhaps to others the wheel of fortune brought back memories of boyhood—dusty roads, a big top on the blue horizon, the whine of the carousel, the bark of the ballyhoo—"circus day back home." For there are, even in the Four Hundred, folk who have known circus days back home. They miss them, too. But they can't go to Coney Island; they are "in society."

And so the ladies in diamonds and evening gowns, and the gentlemen in white fronts and black backs, bought the paddles—and watched the wheel spin—and raised the "ante" from one dollar to five dollars and from that to ten dollars—and shrieked with joy when the wheel stopped and the ballyhoo man barked, "Ninety-two! And the little boy got it!"

Perhaps the "little boy" was a general or a war hero or a famous novelist or the Boss Brummel of Newport. But, whatever he was and no matter how many millions he had cleaned up in Wall Street, he seized his kewpie doll and presented it to his partner with the same flourish he might have used had he bestowed on her the pearls of Catherine of Russia.

Jazz music, floating balloons, waving flags, shimmer of profane stones, visions of red lips and sparkling eyes, shouts of the markers, whir of wheel, rustle of greenbacks and clink of coins, this was the scene upon which Sergeant Cahill and Detective Murphy burst hard on midnight.

Someone had telephoned headquarters. What he said was, "There's gambling going on openly right in the ballroom of the Astor!" And Sergeant Cahill and Detective Murphy were bristling with suspicion, wrath and anxiety to protect Vincent Astor, Otto Kahn et al from being swindled by circus sharpers.

As surreptitiously as it is possible for two headquarters sleuths to be surreptitious in a fashionable ballroom swarming with debutantes and their swains, Sergeant Cahill and Detective Murphy prowled about the edges of the room. And in the course of their prowling they came upon the wheel of fortune.

"Murphy, there is gambling going on here," said Sergeant Cahill.

"Sergeant Cahill, you are right," said Detective Murphy.

The next moment, as Johnny Bates, of New Haven, raised his megaphone to roar, "And the little girl gets it!" he felt his arm grasped, his wheel roughly shaken, and his eardrums assaulted with the announcement, "You're under arrest, young fellow!"

Johnny Bates "went along quietly," as he was told to do. Not so society! As soon as the news of what had happened filtered among the Astors and the Kahns and the Rhinelanders and the rest of them there was action approaching an uproar.

Led by an imperious matron in ermine cloak and six-inch-high coiffure, who insisted on "paying the cute little man's fine," half the guests at the Fifth Annual Aviators' Ball made a break for the police station in the wake of Sergeant Cahill, Detective Murphy and their prisoner.

The desk sergeant at the West Forty-seventh street police station, nodding over a newspaper as the hands of the clock crawled toward one o'clock, blinked and gasped at this silken and scented mob pouring through the portals accustomed to frown mostly on tramps and thieves.

Outside the police station limousines and roadsters and electric taxis were drawing up to the curb in rapid succession. Inside, each minute swelled the number of people protesting the arrest—indignant dowagers sparkling jewels and threats, sleek-groomed clubmen who hadn't been inside of a police station since their college days, flappers giggling and sputtering by turns, and Mr. Laurence Driggs, chairman of the ball committee, arguing angrily with Sergeant Cahill and Detective Murphy.

"But it was a wheel of fortune," declared Sergeant Cahill doggedly.

"Heavens, man! What if it was?" fumed a portly little man in top hat and opera cloak. "They've taken away my liquor! They've suppressed all the best books! They've shut up the racy shows! Are they going to keep me from spending five dollars for a kewpie doll?"

"But this man is a regular carnival worker," objected Detective Murphy. "What's he doing in the Astor ballroom? He admits he runs a concession at Savin Rock, the Coney Island of Connecticut."

"Please! please!" interrupted the desperate Mr. Driggs. "We know all that. We went up and got him to come to New York. We wanted him! Do you understand—we wanted him!"

"Well, you can't have him," ruled the desk sergeant. "His ball's one hundred dollars. Anybody put it up?"

Answers came from a score of throats. Money popped from a dozen pockets. Johnny Bates walked out a free man. Society went back to the dance. And Sergeant Cahill and Detective Murphy leaned back in their chairs, looked at one another with amazed eyes, and probably took joint oaths then and there never again to protect a millionaire from a slick city feller.

real estate boards again asked for it this week. No constructive election law change is apparent now and other problems have been so thoroughly covered in recent years that there is really little to be added to the statutes. Appropriations furnish the great piece de resistance.

Witch-Burning Spirit In General Assembly

COLUMBUS — (Special) — insurgency within the ranks on matters of state issues, now threatens the Republican majority of the Ohio General Assembly. Insurgency is a dreadful thing to the party, having deprived it of over so many elections and opportunity for making history, but the parting of the ways appears to have come as between the conservative or reactionary elements and the progressives. And the legislative test finds the followers of reform with the voices and the other fellows with the votes. After the development of fundamental differences of national issues, the disclosure of divergent viewpoints on local matters is astonishing and yet not so portentous. Though the insurgency comes on the minimum wage matter and the men who led in the movement on the Republican side for preservation of referendum rights have the departure as their course. Senator J. F. Burke of Lorain and George H. Bender of Cuyahoga, take the leap. On minimum wage they will have probably six or seven members of the Ohio Senate with them. The Cuyahoga-Governorship is common to them, they receive also the support of Senator W. E. Tanner, of Ashtabula. The majority proposition is the creation of a commission to study the question. Nor the manner of carrying this out will be the thing, as may easily be seen. If there was a certainly that a fair and unprejudiced commission would be named to study the matter, it would be difficult to see where any minority advocates could have serious objection. Evidently Burke and Bender and their followers do not give full faith and credit to the commission study scheme.

So far as opponents are concerned, the question has been stalled off for another two years and if a controlled investigating board can be persuaded to take the case any longer, the people in the matter are nothing. Seriously, not even the progressives in the majority party have given them consideration. Attempts to bring forward the submission plan to get the reaction of the state at large to the proposition have only met with sneers and frowns on all sides. This is the more remarkable in that the adverse class is a majority. It works the plan. Among opponents the actuating motive is respecting popular settlement of the matter is the fear that the people really do favor the proposed law. But whether they do favor it or do not, it appears to both factions to be something in the nature of trespassing on the rights of the treasury to suggest the use of the treasury funds and right to make their own decision. That's the way of those times.

Contrasted to this mode of procedure is the strategy of the backers of old age pensions. When they evolved their program they found there was little prospect of getting

Might as well wear long skirts, girls, for the prettiest limbs in America have been located. the bill thru the General Assembly. When they took note of the demand for a referendum on the question and forthwith filed an initiative bill in the General Assembly. It will come to no vote in legislative halls, but its pendency gives an opportunity for study and comparison. When the legislature adjourns the supplementary petitions will be obtained and the measure laid before the people. The campaign canvass is being made in behalf of the bill and the educational campaign will be worth more than it costs. The subject will be debated and the state will know the arguments on both sides. It may be stated that the advocates are not extremely sanguine, but, they are good enough sportsmen to take their medicine whether it's sweet or bitter. Their banner may be followed profitably by others who may play the game, is a willingness to play the game, which will make votes for the old age pension proposition. It has already been approved by a sturvy commission and the fight on the merits will not be a slouchy one. When the time comes many people will be surprised by the men and women of wealth who will back the project.

The one almost insurmountable objection is the question of taxes. Policemen, firemen, teachers and many employes of wealthy corporations already have their pension funds and many of them at public expense. This may sound like a queer statement and yet the telegraph company pensions are paid for socially just as truly as the teachers' and police and firemen's stipend for old age. In an equally influential manner the taxation issue enters into the consideration of the minimum wage issue. These are the problems that are before the General Assembly and which the rest may be dismissed as household-keeping problems and not of particular moment. No constructive tax-lament move is to be made, altho the

SOUTH PLANNING GRIDIRON ATTACK ON NORTH IN 1923

ATLANTA, Ga. — When the gridiron hosts swing into action for the 1923 campaign, major leagues of the football world in the north and east will find themselves involuntarily gracing themselves against the attack of powerful elements that will go thundering up from the south to engage them in warfare.

Heretofore the invasion of the squads from Dixie has met with varied success, but has been sufficiently noteworthy to make the leading colleges of the country seek return dates from the best of the southern institutions to such an extent that there is now a keen rivalry for the choice dates.

Advancement of football in the south has been so material in recent years that the big universities of other sections have found a real danger in the annual pilgrimages of the various teams to their do-

main. FEAT OF CENTRE COLLEGE
The feat of Centre College in 1921 when they beat Harvard at Cambridge, attracted attention to the "wonder team," while the strong fight put up by Georgia Tech, Auburn and others, and the victory of Alabama over the University of Pennsylvania also put the "thin red line" from Tusculum on the map. Inter-sectional competition first reached a high stage between the north and east teams and the south back in the days when Dan McGugin first started turning out wonderful machines at Vanderbilt.

It will be recalled that in 1926 the Vanderbilt Commodores defeated the great Carlisle Indians, then at the peak of their glory, by a score of 4 to 0, and in 1910 the Commodores held Yale to a scoreless tie in New Haven.

Two years later the Vanderbilt team held a great Harvard eleven to 3 to 0 score, and from time to time achieved singular success in inter-sectional competition. Only last season McGugin's fine combination held Michigan to a scoreless tie.

HOPES FOR EVEN BREAK
A survey of the tentative schedules for 1923 reveals the fact that many Dixie teams will invade the north for games that should rank among the best of the season. There is a touch of color to these clashes between the greatest teams of the country and the cream of the southern grids that cannot be matched even in "Big Three" or "Big Ten" play. Bitter rivalry of 1861, that swept thru the war lines of Lee and Grant, has been laid to rest, but from it has grown up a modern form of athletic competition that knows no bounds.

While the south offered stern opposition last season, Alabama was the only eleven to put over a big win. Alabama's defeat of Pennsylvania, after that team had defeated the Navy, was one of the upsets of the season.

This year the south feels confident that it will turn the north and east back several times. In fact, is hopeful of getting an even split in the inter-sectional games scheduled.

WILL THE GIANTS REPEAT?

(BY HENRY L. FARRELL)

NEW YORK.—Precedent and everything but actual form is against another world's series in New York this fall. Never in the history of baseball have the two pennants flown three years in succession in the same city but as the clans gather to go south, it looks as tho they might this year.

Prospects of the Giants repeating in the National League seem brighter than those of the Yanks. The National League champions have class and the competition perhaps will be less keen than the Yanks will face in the American League.

This time last spring, it was thought that the Giants would never stagger along with their pitching staff and McGraw's corps of hurlers is none too impressive this year, altho it is better than that with which he started in 1922.

Pat Moran's Cincinnati Reds are looked upon to be the chief rival of the Giants and they have a good chance to win the pennant if they get away better than they did last year. The Pittsburgh Pirates under Bill McKechnie, may be a smoother working combination for the entire route and they will have to be figured in the race. The St. Louis Cards look bad and Branch Rickey will have a time to stay in the first division.

In the American League the Yanks have everything but the "hustle." They are slightly stronger in the field and they have the best pitching staff in baseball—if it works.

With such opposition as can be expected from Detroit, Chicago and St. Louis, the Yanks will have to hustle and play ball.

They won't have a minute to "joy ride."

Every player in the Detroit line-up is a 300 hitter and if Cobb gets the results that his pitching staff promises, these Tigers are going to be some "noise" in the race.

Kid Gleason has a good young pitching staff, from which better work is expected this year.

If Lee Fohl finds a third baseman and a good utility infielder and if he doesn't have some more bad luck with his young pitchers the Browns will help to make it a four-cornered race.

The Cleveland veterans are already in Hot Springs and before the week practically all of the valuable soup bones of the club will be boiling out some place or another. All the teams will be in actual training by March 1.

Nothing big is expected at the spring meeting of the National League here Monday.

The schedule is to be ratified as the chief item of business.

Gray Hermann, boss of the Cincinnati Reds, may bring up the Benton case and if he does there will be a fight. Squire Ebbetts has announced he will side with Hermann but Barney Dreyfuss will marshal all the forces he can to oppose the Red Chief.

If Benton pitches for the Red Chief year after year, the Reds would come mighty near winning the flag.

Hermann wants him and is going to fight for him, he says.

GIRL TO COMPETE IN DOG RACES

The most interesting figure in the American Dog Derby which starts at Ashton, Idaho, on February 22, is "Loll" Hutchins.

This merry girl driver whose plucky performance in the 1922 Derby won her national renown, will again compete in the American train classic.

"Tud" Kent, holder of the American Championship cup, will defend the title and trophy against some of the best crack trailmen and fastest sledge teams in the country.

SEASON 'EAR END

KENTON, O.—The Buffalo Black Rocks, who play here next Wednesday, will start the final period of professional basketball when they meet the Kenton Reds. The last lap of the season finds the local quintet stacking up against some of the fastest teams traveling, including the Canadian Champions from Montreal, Canada, the Denver A. C. the Toledo Follies, the Dayton Buckeyes. The Reds have dropped games this year to the Toledo Maumee V. C., Columbus and the Mansfield Great Americans.

CORNELL WINS

ALBANY, N. Y. — Cornell went into a tie with Princeton for second place in the inter-collegiate basketball league by defeating Penn here Saturday afternoon 38 to 14.

LESSON TO DRIVERS
PIQUA, As a lesson to automobile drivers, the Miami County Automobile Club adopted the scheme of placing a smashed car on exhibition on the public square. Hundreds wanted to know how it happened.

MICHIGAN CAGER MAKES 27 POINTS

WM. J. MILLER.

Wm. J. Miller.

Wm. J. Miller, the University of Michigan's star forward, who was placed on the official All-Conference basketball selection last year, has annexed another honor.

In the Ohio State-Michigan game, played on the Michigan court on January 27, he made a total of 27 points, with 8 field goals and 11 free throws.

This is the highest number of points that have been run up by one man in any Western Conference game in the past two years.

Miller is very instrumental in the success of the Wolverine five this year.

Milwaukee Tournament To Be Biggest Pin Event Of Season

(By A. L. Langtry)

MILWAUKEE.—The success of the coming tournament of the American Bowling Congress, to be held in Milwaukee from March 10 to April 8, is now assured, and an entry of fully 1,500 to 1,600 teams is anticipated by the Congress officials, who are preparing to handle the greatest bowling tournament of the decade, and in fact the greatest athletic carnival that the country has ever witnessed.

Milwaukee and the entire state of Wisconsin are greatly enthused over the prospects of a record breaker and entries are pouring into the office of Secretary Langtry at Milwaukee, bringing the positive assurance of success.

The building in which the tournament is to be held in one of the greatest convention halls in the country, so the bowlers have picked this year a building that will far outshine any former building that they have ever been entertained in for 23 years.

There are few buildings in the country that are spacious enough to allow the installation of twenty-four alleys, side by side, without an obstruction, and still have room for another eight or ten more alleys if needed, and is beginning to look as though eight more alleys will be installed, making the total battery 32, instead of 24 as originally anticipated. This being contemplated on account of the flood of early entries and the many reservations which are to be filled later by teams from all sections of the country and Canada.

500 MILWAUKEE TEAMS
Milwaukee with their local entry of five hundred teams will lead the van of cities to enter five, which will be followed by Chicago with an entry of 300 teams. These two cities alone will enter enough teams to make a huge tournament.

Wisconsin will contribute 200 teams in addition to the five hundred from their metropolis, while Illinois will have another fifty outside of Chicago.

Indiana will have about 30 teams with Indianapolis being the big center of contribution with 25 teams. Ohio is coming strong, and will probably have 150 teams, with Cleveland leading the Buckeyes with 25 quintets.

Michigan will come in good style, with Detroit leading the Wolverines with fifty teams, and other cities in that state following along with another fifty. This will be the first year that Upper Michigan will have teams, and they will be represented with teams from Escanaba, Channing and Marquette.

St. Paul and Minneapolis are figuring on thirty-five teams and a few more from Minnesota will join the ranks. This Iowa will have about fifteen, Missouri thirty-five, and a few points like Salt Lake, Frisco, Los Angeles and Tulsa, Okla., will be represented.

FROM THE EAST
The eastern delegation will be headed by Buffalo with an entry of forty teams, and New York City with ten; Pennsylvania, with forty teams, Syracuse, Rochester, Albany and other New York state cities, will come along as there are many tournament bowlers in that section of the country.

New Haven, Conn., is the farthest east with two teams, and Jacksonville, Fla., is the farthest south with two teams.

Winnipeg, Toronto, Montreal, London, Hamilton and St. Catharines, all Canadian cities will represent the Dominion at the tournament.

Milwaukee intends to be a real host, and will show the bowlers of the country the greatest bowling city in the world.

Swedish Hurdler Expected To Smash American Records

(By Jackson V. Scholz)

NEW YORK — Altho Earl Thomson, the world's greatest hurdler, is now coaching at Dartmouth and is no longer in competition, his amateur ghost is still topping the sticks.

Carl Christernson, Swedish Olympian, has excited eastern track fans and athletes by the remarkable resemblance of his form to that of the invincible Thomson.

At the Newark A. C. games last Wednesday, Christernson won from a dangerous field and the watchers rubbed their eyes in wonder. Not that the performance in itself was especially remarkable, but that the form, style and appearance of the Swedish athlete when in action, recalled so vividly the days when Earl was skimming the sticks on his way to a new record.

Christernson is built very much like Thomson. He uses the same form and the action of the two is almost identical. They both shoot their right arm forward in the same manner as they rise to the hurdle, get the same snap to the right leg which brings them to the ground well balanced and in a running position.

Christernson made only an indifferent showing in the Olympics. He has been in this country but a few months, but his form due to the efforts of Carl Anderson of the Newark A. C., has been completely changed. He learns quickly and admits that the American methods of coaching are more exacting and intensified than those of Sweden.

"We do no indoor running in Sweden," he said, "and I find it a bit difficult to run on a smooth floor with flat shoes."

"Y" FIVE LOSES

MARION, O.—(Special).—Lima, Y. M. C. A. basketball quintet lost their right to claim the sectional cage title and also their opportunity of playing in the state Y tourney when they dropped the deciding game of the series to the Marion Y aggregation Saturday night by the score of 21 to 13.

Before the game, Lima held the edge of the dope, having won from every other Y team in the section with the exception of the Marion five which had taken Lima's scalp earlier in the season. Marion, however, had lost to Findlay, which in turn dropped two battles to Lima. The win Saturday night puts Marion in the title chair of the section.

The floor at Marion, which was considerably smaller than the local cage court hampered the Lima outfit very greatly and was, in a great measure responsible for the defeat of the visiting team.

While every champion in any branch of sport sooner or later is threatened, the defeat of Hoppe by Schaefer a year ago was a huge surprise. The sympathy of every lover of billiards went to Hoppe in defeat. The glad hand was extended by just as many when he regained his title by defeating Schaefer.

"How come Schaefer happened to beat you, Willie?" I asked.

"The old mental hazard turned the trick," he replied. "Early in the match I failed several times to make shots that I should have executed. I began to think that I was off my stroke, that I couldn't make them. The old mental hazard was constantly in front of me. Rarely have I ever been so afflicted. I had a half dozen big chances but failed to take advantage of them. Championship poise was lacking in that match. There you have the reason for my defeat."

Hoppe is one champion who always tries to give the fans a run for their money. He has every exhibition seriously, plays his very best and is disappointed when he fails to do something unusual, something the fans really expect a champion to perform.

It is really surprising what a little thing will do with a champion's game. Recently I saw Hoppe perform in Cleveland at the Cleveland Athletic club. After practicing for a few minutes he came back and sat down beside me, saying:

"The crowd is going to see poor billiards this afternoon. That table is just like asking a big league ball player to perform on a skinned diamond. The cushions are livelier than the ball they used in the big league last year."

Hoppe was right. It required a flock of innings to complete the afternoon's play. In the evening the cushions were changed, and Hoppe demonstrated why he is champion, by running out his 300 points in two innings, getting 204 and an unfinished run of 96.

Hoppe is playing in fine form at present. Four times since regaining his title, he has run out blocks of 200 points in exhibition matches.

A NEW CITY HALL

OFFERS received by the city commission for the old city hall property on W. High-st have revived the matter of disposing of the dilapidated structure now used and the erection of a modern building to house the city government.

The commission has at present a tentative offer considered by some experts as a good price for the old hall. In such a sale, only the land worth can be considered since the brick structure is in such condition that it is of practically no value to anyone who might buy it.

Downtown property values have mounted so rapidly during the last few years that what would have been considered fabulous prices a few years ago now are common, and fixing a fair price on this property will be no small matter in view of prospects for the future.

Several considerations enter into the proposition of selling the old city hall and providing new quarters. One of the principal among these is the fact that the old hall is a fire trap, a constant menace to the records of the city, which are invaluable. No amount of repair would bring it near modern perfection which should obtain.

Should the property be sold, the city would face the problem of providing a new building. This, of course would entail expense, the amount depending on the decision of the commission as to what would be proper.

Two opportunities would present themselves—remodeling and enlarging of the existing building on E. High-st, and erection of a new building, probably in the public square. Of the two, a new building in the square is undoubtedly the more advisable. If it could be arranged to build a joint structure with the county, using a part for city and another part for county purposes together with the possibility of interesting the federal government in the proposition to provide quarters for the new federal court here, the success of the undertaking would be assured.

This proposition offers a means of solving the problem of the old square, now a disgrace to the city. There would however, be the question of establishing ownership of the square since the county believes it is not city property. This undoubtedly could be worked out satisfactorily.

Sale of the W. High-st property should net between $130,000 and $160,000, men posted on real estate values declare. A new building in the square would cost at least twice this amount, which would necessitate the issuance of bonds, which the commission is empowered to do, up to $200,000 for such purposes.

There undoubtedly would be some opposition to this procedure because of the financial condition of the city government. Issuance of bonds, however, would not affect the status of operating affairs at present. It is not improbable that the city could work out an arrangement for accommodating those seeking office space here which would make the indebtedness self supporting so far as the interest on such a bond issue would be concerned. There is a big demand for office space at present and this will continue since building is not keeping pace with the demand.

The city commission will be guided by the desire of the public in this matter, it has been announced by Mayor Harold Cunningham. It is proposed to lay the proposition before the taxpayers in a thorough manner in order that an expression of sentiment may be had before any steps are taken.

Since it is inevitable that the city must have a new administrative building in the near future, this proposal is worthy of the consideration of all Lima citizens.

CURSE OF DIVORCE

NEARLY thirty suits for divorce have been filed in Allen-co since January 1. The start thus made in 1933 indicates that the record number of cases of marital wrecks will pass the 300 mark ere the close of the year.

This county is only one of 38 in Ohio, and Ohio is but one of the 48 states of the union. If the same ratio is maintained in every county in Ohio, the prospective total for the year will mount to more than 26,000 for this state alone, or more than a million for the United States.

The situation has become so appalling that a drive has been started for uniform marriage and divorce laws in all the states. A resolution has been introduced in congress proposing an amendment to the federal constitution to empower enactment of a law with national application. The proposed law, as model for state enactment, defines who shall be permitted to marry, fixes causes for divorce and provides that the people of the several states shall have opportunity to consider what is proposed should three-fourths of the states adopt the constitutional amendment giving congress authority to act.

There is need of this sort of action. There are now 48 varieties of marriage and divorce laws in as many states, each having a different code. It is designed to prevent hasty and foolish marriages and to make divorce more difficult and less necessary. With a national uniform law on marriages and divorce, there will be no Reno and no Gretna Green.

Steps should be taken to make divorce no easier, but to make marriage safer, to insure children of the future better health and heredity and to prevent hasty and ill-considered marriages. Migratory divorce should be eliminated altogether and children who are legitimate under the law in one state should be legitimate in all.

Amendments to the constitution of the United States are generally not accepted enthusiastically, but in this instance there is good reason to believe that little or no hindrance will be set up.

GOLDEN IDOL

IN grandpa's day, about the best possible compliment was: "He's worth his weight in gold." We still repeat it occasionally.

About $45,000 worth of gold weighs as much as the average American. Four per cent interest on $45,000 is $1800 a year.

So anyone earning $1800 a year is worth his weight in gold. The man with an income of $3600 a year is worth twice his weight in gold. And so on upward—or downward. Your earning power represents the interest on that intangible value, yourself.

Of course, it's rather futile to try to put an individual's value on a money basis, the most people do. The scientist who isolates a disease germ and learns how to check its slaughter of human lives is worth, to humanity, more than all the gold in existence. So with inventors, far-sighted organizers and people who by their daily example spread the contagion of common honesty and the brotherhood of man.

Another old-time expression is "Pure as gold." It doesn't mean as much as most of us believe. Gold 100 per cent pure can be seen in the chemist's laboratory. But it is rarely used in such pure form commercially.

In most American-made jewelry, the gold is only 59 per cent of the metal, and the rest is alloy.

About 45 out of every 100 pounds of gold hoarded for money purposes in the whole world now is in the United States. American gold hoardings, by early spring, probably will exceed four billion dollars.

A considerable part of this huge amount is with us only temporarily. As the years slip by, a lot of it will flow back where it was before the war and where it belongs in any well-balanced system of international economics.

Gold! Gold! It is the world-wide lure, from savage jungle to Wall Street. Gold is hypnotic, to the extent that most of us would rather find a nugget of gold than anything else. You have this illustrated in the thrill that comes when you find any kind of gold-value money, even a dime. A man finding a few coins will stop and search for more, tho his time may be worth $100 an hour.

LENT OPENS WEDNESDAY

LENT, the annual period of 40 days when those religiously inclined give themselves over to fasting and abstinence to the extent prescribed by their faith, begins on Ash Wednesday, February 14. Valentine day also falls on the same date.

Lent takes its name from the use of ashes in ceremonial as a symbol of penitence. In Catholic churches the priests make the sign of the cross on the foreheads of the faithful with ashes, denoting humility. This ceremony is traced back to the time when sackcloth and ashes as outward signs of penance were spoken of by prophets featured in the Old Testament.

Lent means Lencien, or spring. On account of its early arrival it is quite naturally associated with the beginning of spring. Easter, which marks the close of the penitential season, is the occasion for joy and thanksgiving over the triumph of the Risen Lord. It is at a time when nature is reawakening and the lethargy of the cold months is being thrown off.

Mention of Lent is made as early as 325 A. D. and is found in a Canon of the Council of Nice. The faithful of most all churches observe Lent in some manner, preferably by fasting and unusual humility and special prayers. For the most part, social activities are subdued or given up altogether during the season of fasting preparatory to the Easter Festival.

As in connection with many customs of the present, the observance of Lent is of ancient derivation, handed down thru the ages. While not preserved intact, the methods of observance of ages ago are held up to the present in many ways.

Social affairs in Lima and elsewhere are expected to witness the lull that usually comes with the observance of Lent. Social calendars for the next 40 days will be limited in the number of events planned. Frivolity will be at a low ebb and works of charity will be in the ascendency.

TOLL OF ACCIDENTS

MOTOR wrecks claimed 306 lives in Ohio in 1932, according to report of the bureau of vital statistics.

When it is considered that automobiles were responsible for the snuffing out of these lives, the pleas that are constantly being made for more care and caution in the operation of these devices should awaken more general concern.

The auto industry is only in its infancy. They are even now indispensable to mankind and with constantly increasing devices of simplification, they are expected to come more and more into general use as time advances.

It must not be understood that no attention has been or is now being given toward the perfecting of safety devices. The opposite is the situation. There are probably 800,000 motor cars in use in Ohio at the present time. If this number of vehicles were of the crude construction of a decade ago, the number of fatalities would doubtless be even greater. However, the number of fatalities keeps pace with the growth of motor transportation. In 1921 a total of 740 persons were killed in motor accidents.

Applied to the state at large, the number of fatalities happened at the rate of 16 a week, or more than two a day. Where accurate record was maintained it was disclosed that more accidents occurred on country roads than on city streets. This confirms the observations of many persons, and in general is held to tend to prove that high speed is responsible for more mishaps than such factors as dangerous highways or defects in machines.

It is also disclosed that 23 per cent of the fatal accidents were of persons struck by machines and that carelessness of pedestrians and of motor car drivers divided the cause for the accidents. The motto "Safety First" with both drivers and pedestrians should have more general observance.

We have auto schools. Why not pedestrian schools?

SERVICE—SAVING THE TEETH

Teeth are bones. The dentin is practically identical chemically with bone—it consists of about 85 per cent calcium phosphate and 10 to 13 per cent calcium carbonate.

Some dentists have accepted a theory that dental caries (decay of teeth and cavity formation) is caused by sugar and starch adhering to the teeth, undergoing fermentation by bacterial action, forming lactic acid, which dissolves out the calcium or lime and produces the cavity. This is merely a theory. Some dentists do not accept such a theory, among them Dr. Percy R. Howe of Harvard university. Dr. Howe cites experiments which failed to support the theory. Twenty guinea pigs, fed for a year on a diet containing large amounts of sugar (dextrose, levulose, lactose, saccharin, dextrin) and white flour, showed no injury to the teeth, although the sugar and starch constantly adhered to the teeth and bacterial fermentation was constantly going on. Some of the best preserved teeth are in the mouths of children who eat extraordinarily large amounts of candy and starchy "breakfast foods."

Dr. Howe, who is assistant professor of dental research and chief of the research laboratory, Forsyth Dental Infirmary for Children, has found that young animals fed on a diet poor or lacking in the antiscorbutic factor (the vitamin which prevents scurvy) suffer not only softening of the bones but decalcification of the teeth. Even though these young animals may gain steadily in weight (and I particularly urge mothers who try to remember this) they suffer grave impairment in the development of the bones and teeth. If the diet is corrected so that the young animal is given a fair allowance of the vitamin which prevents scurvy the bones and teeth immediately begin to grow harder and stronger. They become recalcified. This remarkable change may be brought about merely by adding to the diet such a vitamin-rich article as orange juice. Orange juice as well as tomato juice and many other fresh fruit juices and fresh vegetables are well known as preventives and cures of scurvy in man.

A baby at the breast gets all the vitamins he needs in his business of growing and thriving, provided his mother is not subjected to any silly restrictions of diet. The nursing mother should eat everything in the form of wholesome food and drink which are good for her ordinarily and never avoid any item of food merely because some gossip opines it may do this and that to the baby. The more varied the mother's diet, the more fresh fruits and vegetables and reliable salads, the better for the baby's health and his teeth.

Infants cheated of their birthright by the unfitness of the mother, and condemned to worry along on some substitute, ought to receive a daily ration of orange juice, tomato juice, peach juice or other fresh fruit or vegetable juice, a few teaspoonfuls, from the age of a few weeks upwards.

Formula for Bad Cough

Answer:—Best formula I know for such a case is consult your physician pro re nata.

Wild Hairs
Please tell me the cause and cure for wild hairs in the eyelids.—Mrs. B.

Answer:—That is a mistaken idea. The hairs of the eyelids are not "wild," and should not be pulled out. The real state of affairs is an inflammation or infection of the edge of the lid, that calls for treatment. Sometimes the eyelid becomes distorted as a result of burns or other injury or of chronic inflammations of the lids. So that the margins curl up. Even this is not remedied by pulling out the lashes, but may require surgical relief.

POEMS YOU WILL ENJOY

By BERTON BRALEY

IT'S UP TO YOU

Jim was just a little weak and just a little wild,
Jack was steadygoing as a clock,
Jim went to the city, where the blaring lights beguiled,
Jack stayed home and went to raising stock;
He worked and planned with clarity and won to great prosperity
And he's a solid citizen today,
A pattern of propriety, of wisdom and sobriety.

Jim was not successful in the city's stress and strife,
He couldn't keep his money or his job,
He made a mess of business and of morals and of life,
He's just a sort of wastrel in the mob;

Weak, reckless and importunate, he's but one more unfortunate
Who couldn't stand the gulf—and came to harm,
And home folks who referred to him said,
"All that has occurred to him is just because he went and left the farm."

They blame the wicked city for the ruining of Jim—
But I cannot somehow view it in that light.

For if Jack had sought the city—it would not have ruined him,
And I think he would have prospered there, all right,
And if Jim had never blown away I think he would have thrived away

His chances for acquiring honest self.
The place upon the map you are won't change the kind of character you are.

Your destiny depends upon yourself.

'ROUND LIMA HOUR BY HOUR

WITH APOLOGIES

BY OH. OH. JACKENRIM

A Page from the Diary of an Antiquated Reporter: (MIAMI)—Early up, and not pleased with the posture of affairs. Weather cloudy, but cleared away before I finished my radishes. Was trampled by a philosopher of no mean note. Whose tale was that snow-birds could all come south. Just around the corner from this eating caravansary being the Green Tree Inn. Quite smart, and rates 25c for breakfast, 50c for luncheon, 75c for dinner and a bed 50c the night. They don't serve tea.

Strolled thru Flagler street, my poor head filled with thoughts on a winter head down beach. Sat on the banks of Biscayne Bay watching old men trying to be boys. Fishing for fish that didn't bite. Thence to the Royal Palm, where many men were watching the stock exchange quotations.

Deciding whether they could stay another day or take passage back to fresh milk. And mayhap, gaol, if they leave the snow stick.

Lunched with M'scur Mizner, formerly of Ft. Wayne. Who has a modern apartment at $40 a month, which you can't have even in Lima. He told me the thermometer has never gone higher than 96 in the history of this town. At Prior's open air concert this afternoon, a woman from Eastport, Me., asked a farmer's wife from Iowa, how she loved the acoustics. And the maker of butter out middle-west way, said. She didn't care so much for them, but she just loved the saxophones. Price Virgil Knisely, the mercantile prince.

It costs $37.50 for a round trip to Havana from Miami, but for one way they charge you $25 flat. They explain that is done as a money inducement for the tourists to return. And if they didn't have the come-back con-

Bowed in fine friendliness to Dr. and Mrs. F. L. Faust, and she I hadn't seen. The doctor has decided to go on to Nassau. Tell Roy Dunn for 11,000 circulation the Miami papers charged 75c the inch for advertising, and collect every ten days. Three times a month.

At dinner to-night, the youngest woman guest in the house was given a birthday party. She has 12 more months to reach the 50 mark. In the evening, Auntie May-me got herself ready, so away to hear Mme. Schumann-Heineck at the Methodist church. The boarders at the Green Tree Inn. And other tourists who come for the air, the heat and the scenery and not to show their clothes. Stood on the side-walks outside and heard every note. Avoiding the heat and $3.20 for a seat. All the discourse nowadays is about the flu. So, early to bed.

MAIL TO CROSS U. S. IN 30 HOURS

New York-Frisco Air Line Will be Opened Soon

SERVICE PLANS DESCRIBED

Emergency Landings and Signal Lights to be Arranged

(BY HARRY HUNT)

WASHINGTON — (Special) — Thirty-hour transcontinental mail service from New York to San Francisco is scheduled as the next step in development of Uncle Sam's air mail lines.

Present plans contemplate inauguration of this 30-hour transcontinental service by late spring or early summer, although no definite date has been set.

Fixing of the starting date will be governed by the physical problems involved in locating and equipping some 35 emergency landing fields along the section of the route that must be covered by night flying and equipping with signal lights a lighted airway 900 miles long between Chicago and Cheyenne.

"The route to be followed is that now covered by the six mail services already in operation," says Carl F. Egge, general superintendent of the air mail division of the Postoffice Department. "That is from New York to Cleveland, Chicago, Omaha, North Platte, Cheyenne, Rock Springs, Salt Lake City, Elko, Reno, San Francisco."

"The lighted airway and emergency landing fields for night flying will be along that part of the route between Chicago and Cheyenne. "Leaving New York at noon, the thru-air mail will reach Chicago by evening. The 900 miles between Chicago and Cheyenne will then be covered by night flying. Out of Cheyenne at daylight the following morning, the mail would be delivered in Frisco that evening—30 hours after leaving New York."

"Surveying parties are now engaged in locating the emergency landing fields that will be required for the stretch to be covered by night flying."

"These will be approximately 25 miles apart and in addition to carrying signal lights will be flood-lighted to assist night landings when such are necessary."

"All the planes used in this stretch of the route will be equipped with instruments to assist in making emergency landings at night. These emergency fields must be about 40 miles apart with clear approaches. "Every three miles along this Chicago-Cheyenne route there will be a guide light that will alternately flash on and off, so it may not be mistaken for other lights."

"This through New York-San Francisco service is not only being considered—it has been definitely decided on and we are going ahead with the physical work that must be done before it is started."

"At present the air mail carries 100 San Francisco mail out of New York. All we do is by day flying to advance the mails so as to shorten their time in transit. We carry the mail by day, but turn it over to the night planes to forward during the night."

"With emergency landing fields lighted and ready at intervals of every 25 miles and with a lighted airway along the whole of the route covered by night flying, the difficulties and dangers of night flying will be minimized to the utmost."

What Our "Hothouse Beauties" Did to the Alpine Sports

And the Surprise the Scandalized Burghers Got When the All-Night Fox-Trotters Buckled on Skis and Skates and Lifted All the Honors

Miss Dorothy Molson Taking Off for a Long Jump at the Murren, Switzerland, Ski Contest.

ST. MORITZ

IT'S too bad about these fragile, frivolous American girls—these "hothouse beauties" who rise after dark, descend to dinner in gorgeous gowns and jewels, dance and play bridge till dawn, and never see the snow except through the windows of their hotel!

Right after Herr Duer Kohler, chief executive of St. Moritz, thus contemptuously crushed them, the "hothouse beauties" risked a nose or two outdoors and won for Uncle Sam just about all the championships at the biggest sporting carnival of the winter!

And now the American colony at this famous resort is snickering openly at the crimson Herr Kohler and other stolid burghers whose Swiss conventions were violated by the flappers from overseas. They don't understand yet how a few American girls can also out-

Miss Maxine Elliott, the famous actress; Mr. C. E. Rogers, the Marquis de Polignac, nee Crosby; Miss Winnifred Bridgeman, of New York, and other leading social lights.

They did ask the question, too, but Herr Kohler named no names. He contented himself with a snort, a lift of his bushy eyebrows and a glance that seemed to take in all the pretty little ladies chatting in the lounge, fox trotting in the big ballroom or rushing out for a moonlight to ogan scoot down the nearest Alp.

For, despite Herr Kohler's assertion, there were, even then, some American girls who tobogganed and skated and skied. Herr Kohler couldn't have meant these girls, could he?

Why, American girls just adored skiing! Of course, many of them were novices. Those who were learning did have a difficult time keeping the runners from wiggling out to the sides and plumping them into a snowdrift. But the veterans were wild about climbing up and up to some Alpine peak and then rushing breathlessly down again at express train after dark, descend to dinner in gorgeous gowns and jewels, dance and play bridge till dawn, and never see the snow except through the windows of their hotel!

Since Herr Kohler refused to specify which girls were "hothouse beauties" and which were not, every American girl at St. Moritz took his words to a hot head. The atmosphere between them and Herr Kohler after that was chillier than usual, even for the Alps. And then, when the date of the big Winter carnival was announced, there was noticeable a distinct change in their attitude.

Where they had been wont to dash out in the mornings, chattering like a flock of magpies, there were conferences in private sitting rooms and whispering groups in the lobbies. Where they could generally be found of an afternoon at the rink or the tea room or the bobsled run, now a number were missing for long hours together, and, when they returned to the hotel, they walked in with glowing faces and declared they were "too tired" to attend the dance that night.

Only two weeks intervened between Herr Kohler's public indictment of American "hothouse beauties" and the carnival, but in those fourteen days the objects of his scorn evidently made good use of their time. Herr Kohler and the Swiss burghers cannot have noticed the whispering groups or the "mysteriously missing" for they were frankly startled when they read the list of entrants in the various events.

There were many of these, from long and short dashes on skis to the prize for cutting the fanciest figures on ice skates. And in every event the candidates included at least half a dozen American girls, along with their Swiss, English, French and German sisters.

Some of the Swiss laughed. Some of the English girls, most of whom had scorned the dances and preferred to spend their entire time in the open, hid smiles behind polite hands. This was going to be a rich joke!

And it was a joke, but not on the American girls. The butt of it was Herr Kohler. For led by Miss Bridgeman, who Herr Kohler seemed to have forgotten is a champion skater in her own country, the "hothouse beauties" romped out on the rink and won; romped out on the snowy mountainside and won, romped out everywhere and won! Not all of them took prizes, but they corralled enough, along with seconds and thirds, to put the Stars and Stripes decidedly on top.

And then, just to clinch the argument, the Americans challenged their English competitors, who had come second in the carnival, to a mountain-climbing contest, not on skis, not on snowshoes, not on sleds or runners of any kind, but in plain, ordinary boots!

Of course, the challenge was accepted. The English girls had lost like good sports-women, and they welcomed the opportunity to retrieve themselves. One of the most difficult peaks to climb in the vicinity of St. Moritz was selected for the test, and each country was represented by six stalwart and ardent girls. Once more, to the amazement of Herr Kohler and other spectators, the Americans were victorious!

"Congratulations!" the pretty leader of the English team told the captain of the "Hothouse Beauties," as the Americans boldly christened themselves. "And now tell us how, as they say in your country, did you get this way?"

The American leader blushed and laughed.

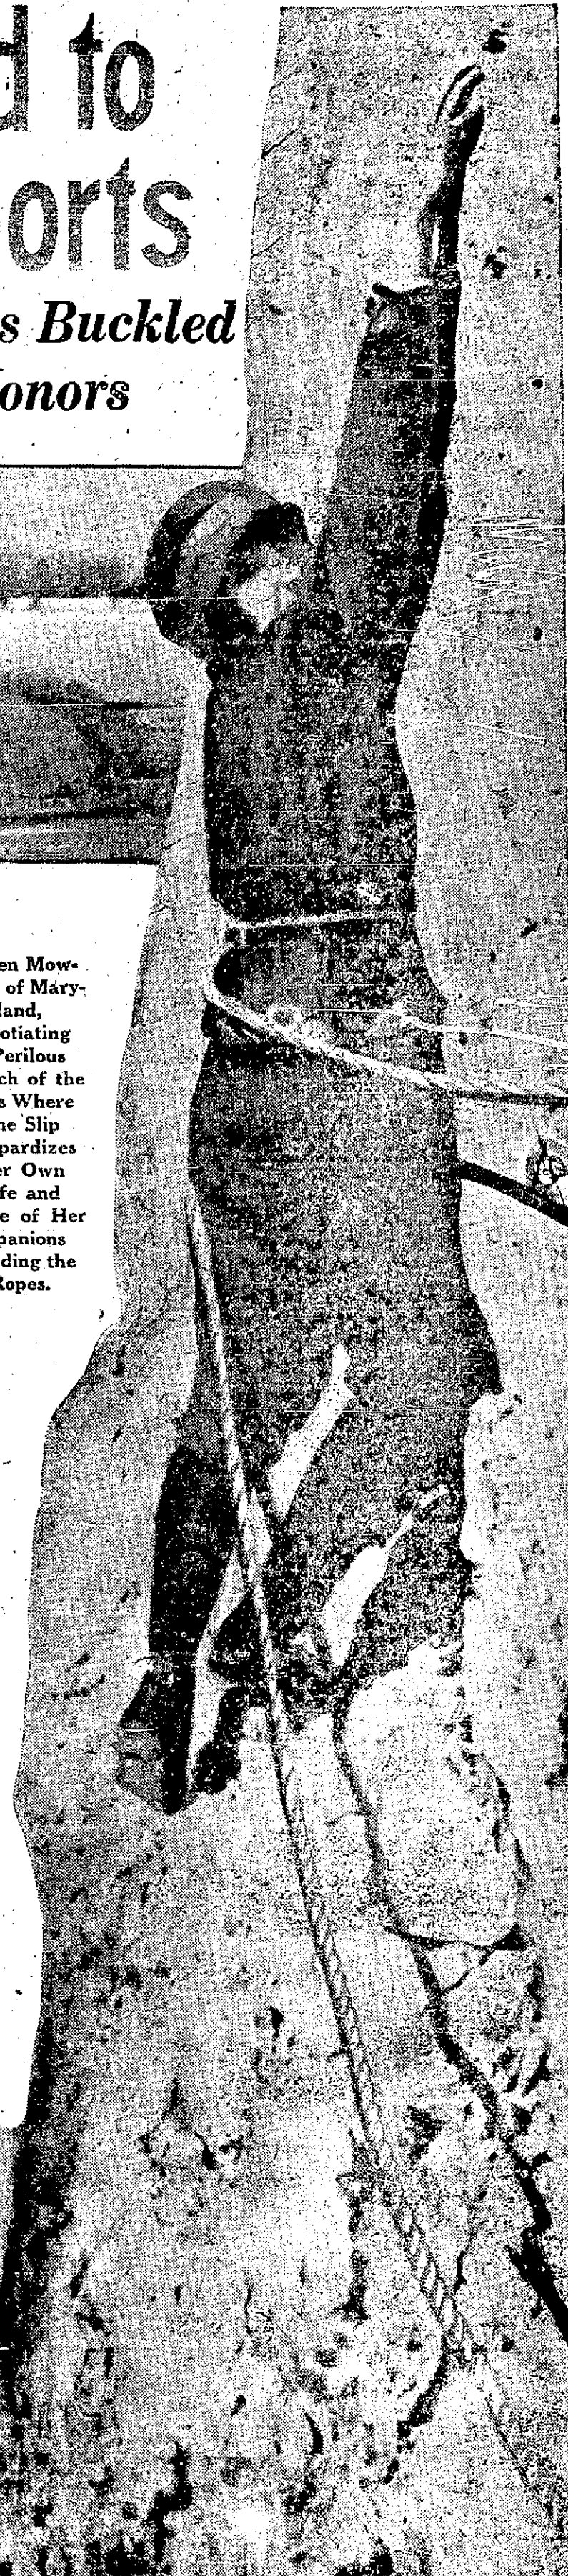

"I'd like to answer that all American girls are born athletes," she said, "but that wouldn't be strictly true. Many of them are, but I'll have to admit we've done some strenuous practicing in the last few weeks."

"That doesn't take away any credit from your win," the English girl generously asserted. "Anybody who can learn skiing in two weeks deserves to be a champion. Just one other thing—why this sudden activity?"

"Heavens! haven't you heard?" exclaimed Miss America. She turned for a swift glance at the crowd. "If you want the answer, find Herr Kohler."

But Herr Kohler was not there to ask. Quietly, and without even snorting, he had slipped away.

ARMORY FOR LIMA IS PROSPECT

Headquarters Company To Be Recruited Here

CITY TO HAVE THREE UNITS

Structure Expected To Cost State $250,000

That construction of a state armory in Lima will be accelerated soon, became evident Saturday when Major Frank H. Hume, Second Battalion, 148th Infantry, announced that a headquarters company will be recruited here.

Establishment of the new National Guard organization in Lima will raise the number of soldiers in the city to approximately 300, when all three outfits are recruited up to peace footing.

Construction of an armory large enough to house three units will be forced upon the state within the next year, guard officials believe. A building adequate for this purpose will cost not less than $250,000.

Company G, 148th Infantry and Battery A, the artillery unit, are housed separately in quarters that are too small, but the only ones to be had.

The headquarters company will be composed of four sections, including radio and panel, who, and phone, visual, telegraph and message.

All of the personnel of the organization will be specialists.

LATEST EQUIPMENT

Equipment provided will come direct from the war department and will be the latest in army communication devices. It is declared.

The radio and panel section is composed of one corporal and five privates. A sergeant, two corporals and five privates are in the wire and telephone section. They operate the telephones and switchboards and keep up communication lines.

One corporal and four privates compose the telegraph and visual sections. The message section coordinates the various other units. Several typists, dispatch riders, and chauffeurs will be added to the outfit.

Officers for the Headquarters company have not been commissioned by Governor Donahue. For the present Major Hume and Sergeant Major P. H. Runyan, will be in charge.

Young men interested in radio, telephones or telegraph will find it worth while to enlist in the organization, Major Hume declares. The best of instructions will be given the members.

All who enlist will be accepted on the same basis as soldiers in other organizations, with basic pay. Two weeks' drill will be held annually at Camp Perry, on the shore of Lake Erie.

ORIENTAL IMMIGRATION BAN CARRIED IN BILL

WASHINGTON — All Oriental immigration into the United States would be banned under a bill introduced in the house Saturday by Representative Miller, Washington.

In a statement accompanying the measure which proposed to extend the provisions of the Chinese exclusion act to apply to Japanese and Hindus Miller declared the influx of Orientals into the Pacific coast states and particularly Hawaii had reached "a menacing stage."

In view of the action of the house immigration committee in reporting favorably on the two percent immigration bill which prohibits Japanese immigration, house leaders believed there would be no action on the Miller bill in this congress.

DISCOVERER OF X-RAY DIES AT AGE OF 78

MUNICH.—Professor William Conrad Roentgen, discoverer of the X-ray, died here Saturday at the age of 78 years.

Professor Roentgen was born in Lempe, Prussia, and was educated in Holland and Switzerland.

His discovery of the X-ray, for which he was chiefly known, was purely accidental.

While he was working with a highly exhausted vacuum tube, he first discovered the ray and found it had the power of passing through objects which are ordinarily opaque.

ONE ALLEGED LIQUOR OFFENDER IS TAKEN IN SATURDAY-NIGHT RAIDS

The usual number of Saturday night raids were staged by the police "sponge squad" with only one alleged offender being taken in the net. All other "tips" proved to be false.

Clarence Place, 38, of 400 N. Central-av was released on a $1000 bond to appear in police court Monday morning to answer a charge of illegal possession of liquor.

Police allege they found a pop bottle partly filled with illegal liquor at his soft drink place.

OHIO ROAD CONTRACTS WILL BE DISAPPROVED

COLUMBUS.—Eight highway construction contracts, totaling approximately $40,000, awarded by Highway Director Herrick at the January 26 contract letting, will be disapproved by Finance Director Baker, it appeared certain Saturday night.

Only three contracts let have been submitted by Herrick to the finance department for approval. Baker said, altho the law requires the action of the finance director before the contracts can be made.

"As I interpret the law, contracts must be awarded in ten days after the opening of the bids," said Baker, "and that period has already expired. I do not see, therefore, how I can approve of these contracts."

Failure of Herrick to submit the new contracts to the finance department comes as a sequel to the controversy between the two departments as a result of finance Director Baker's refusal last month to approve a contract given an Akron firm for work on the Cleveland-Massillon road.

120 ARE KILLED IN MINE BLAST

Hope For Men Buried In New Mexico Pit Abandoned

54 BODIES ARE BROUGHT OUT

Only Two of 122 Entombed Workers Survive

DAWSON, N. M.—(United Press)—Fifty-four bodies had been brought out of Dawson Mine Number 1 Saturday night following the explosion Thursday which imprisoned 122 miners.

One hundred and twenty miners perished in the disaster. This was the belief here Saturday night as weary rescue workers frantically ploughed thru debris in the mine tunnels, far beneath the ground in search of more victims of New Mexico's second greatest mine disaster when 122 were entombed by a terrific explosion in the Phelps-Dodge Corporation's Number 1 mine Thursday afternoon.

Two of the men, Charles Kantal and Felini Martini, walked out of the death tunnel uninjured after waiting 16 hours for fresh air to be pumped into the shaft and cheating death by wrapping their water-soaked sweaters about their heads, to combat the gases that followed the blast.

"It is more than doubtful that any remain alive in the mine," Judge T. L. Kinney, coroner, told the United Press. "The 60 men in the shaft have been there 48 hours," he said, "and the chances are mighty slim that any of them are living."

Kinney said the amazing escape of Kantal and Martini probably was due to the fact that they were a considerable distance from the scene of the explosion. He declared mine engineers told him searching parties had not penetrated to that part of the working where the blast occurred.

INQUEST TO BE HELD

"My jury is making preliminary investigations now, but the actual inquest will not be held until the mine is cleared and it is possible to go into the place where the blast happened," he said.

Kinney conducted an inquest here October 22, 1913, when 263 men killed in a mine explosion. Three possible causes of the explosion were advanced by miners Saturday night. It was generally believed that a spark set off a gas pocket which in turn ignited the highly explosive coal dust.

The tremendous blast in the heart of the mountain apparently withered all life before it clear to the mine entrance, engineers said, killing the men instantly.

Funerals of several of the victims were held Saturday afternoon as workmen uncrated plain black coffins at the little railroad station.

Women mourned the dead while others whose husbands and father, were still unaccounted for, gathered around the mine mouth scanning the face of each body brought out. A shriek told of an identification. Others kept the vigil praying "their men" would be brought from the shaft alive.

Mrs. George Schaffer, 211 N. Maple-st, Delphos, was taken to St. Rita's hospital Saturday night, following an accident in which the bone in her left leg was broken in two places.

DURR AGAIN IN TROUBLE

"Doc" Durr, 28, of 30 N. Central-av, was arrested Saturday afternoon for non-payment of a fine from an old liquor charge, dating back several months. He will be arraigned in police court Monday morning.

PREDICTION OF SNOW REALIZED

Fulfillment of prediction of snow came thru more quickly than was anticipated even by the forecaster himself, affecting Saturday night conditions.

Fall of "the beautiful" began in the evening, leading an air of gaiety to scenes in the downtown section as shoppers wended their way thru the streets. The visitation was also seen as a new menace by "householders in the enforcement of the 'snow ordinance'."

None were ordered into court Saturday by Chief Anker's checkup squad, therefore it is presumed that a lot everybody acted quickly and effectively with snow shovels or brooms within four hours after day-break.

However, if snow covers the ground to a considerable depth this Sabbath morning, the provisions of the law relative to clearing off the walks will apply, even tho it is Sunday.

More snow is promised for today, according to the forecast, which reads: Cloudy Sunday and Monday, with probable local snows Sunday. Not much change in temperature.

The mercury was dropping slowly at midnight Saturday and snow was still falling.

HOPE FOR IRISH PEACE NOT YET ABANDONED

DUBLIN — The free state government considers the door to peace in southern Ireland still is open, despite Lian Lynch's refusal, in the name of the rebels, to accept amnesty terms offered by President Cosgrave and General Mulcahy.

However, it was said Saturday afternoon, in the event that the insurgents persist in their campaign which has resulted in destruction by fire and explosives of numerous residences and government property in the south, the free state will inaugurate drastic measures of repression February 18. On that date the amnesty offer, applying to all the rebels who will lay down their arms expires.

Cosgrave has asked additional troops for the national army in case the insurgents continue their guerrilla warfare. The free state president had a long conference Saturday with Premier Bonar Law in London, the latter remaining over the week-end for the purpose of considering the Irish situation.

GOVERNMENT ORGANIZATION PLAN READY FOR ACTION

WASHINGTON—President Harding will lay before congress early next week, the government reorganization plan of the administration which recommends several material changes in government departments here.

Chief among the changes urged from the standpoints of its likelihood of being adopted, is the creation of a new department, a department of public welfare with the addition of another cabinet member as its head. Plans for this department which were drawn up in detail at a secret conference here recently between Dr. C. E. Sawyer, the president's personal physician, and a group of doctors and physical educators from all parts of the country, were revealed Saturday.

PLANE PLUNGES INTO SEA, PASSENGERS ARE RESCUED

HAVANA.—Spilled from the seaplane Ponce De Leon in shark-infested waters off Morrocaste, eight passengers were rescued late Friday.

The seaplane piloted by Captain Miller, who was at the helm of the aeromarine plane flying boat, Columbus, which went down with loss of five lives near here last month, crashed on one wing after the pilot had made a sharp swerve to avoid striking a vessel.

The occupants, Cuban newspaper men and photographers, who had started on the flight with the intention of taking photographs of Havana from the air, were hurled from the plane into the sea.

Schools of man-eating sharks infest the vicinity. The passengers were able to swim or cling to the wreckage. A pilot boat steamed full speed to the rescue.

The Ponce De Leon was towed into the harbor badly damaged.

DOG ROUNDUP TO OPEN TUESDAY

Humane Officer And Deputy Sheriff Lay Plans

CANINE POUND TO BE OPENED

Rush Of Owners For Tags As Last Day Nears

Crusade to rid Allen-co of stray canines is scheduled to begin Tuesday morning, when Frank Killian, humane officer, reinforced by one deputy sheriff assigned by Harvey B. Crosson, high sheriff, will sail forth. The untagged dog will be their meat.

Strict observance of the law in dealing with the "dog-gone" situation was announced Saturday by Sheriff Crosson.

"It isn't the dogs that are to blame," he declared, "it's the owners. Lots of them want to own dogs, when there is no license to pay. But when paying time comes, dogs are plentiful and masters are scarce."

Each dog captured will be held for three days by Killian. "Yes, the owner appears within that period the animal will be disposed of according to law."

TOUGH ON DOGS

It's going to be a situation that will be dog-gone ticklish for the poor hound without a tag.

County Auditor C. R. Phillips is doing a big business in dog tags. He believes that the agitation has started owners up to the point where they realize they must pay. All of the money accruing from sale of tags goes into the county deaf animal fund. Claims are paid from the fund semi-annually to farmers and others who suffer havoc to flocks 1 sheep by dogs. The balance reverts to the general fund.

Plan of disposition of the carcasses of dogs has not been determined by Sheriff Crosson and the county commissioners. Suggestion made that the county go into the dog pelt business is under consideration. The only draw back, Commissioner John Thompson points out, is that winter is almost over.

"U. S. CHILDREN IN SHACKLES"

Statesman Declares Million in Labor Bondage

RESULT OF NULLIFYING LAW

Many Only 14 Years Old Work 11 Hours a Day

(BY OWEN R. LOVEJOY)
General Secretary of the National Child Labor Committee

WASHINGTON (Special) — The extent to which the children of the United States are suffering from the nullifying of the federal child labor law of 1919, by the Supreme Court decision of last May, may be measured by the fact that only 13 states meet in all particulars the standards of the federal law.

Eight states have the general broad provisions, but make some specific exemption.

Twenty-seven states are below the standards in one or more of the provisions.

Thus in Georgia 12-year-old dependent children may be worked 10 hours a day, 60 hours a week, in Utah boys over 14 may be worked unlimited hours, and children at any age in factories, in Mississippi boys of 12 may be worked in mills, factories and canneries.

BOYS WORKING IN MINES

In an anthracite coal mining district studied by the children's bureau, 519 boys under 14 years of age were found to have been employed in the breakers contrary to law, and, likewise in violation of law, 137 under 16 were working underground.

In the interval that elapsed between the first (1916) and the second (1919) federal child labor laws, the bureau made an investigation of oyster and shrimp canneries along the Gulf coast and found "more than 300 children under 14 years of age, some as young as 5 or 6, at work in cold, damp, drafty sheds, their hands cut by sharp oyster

Closely following the Supreme Court decision removing federal protection from working children, came the publication of the 1920 census figures.

According to the census of 1910 there were 1,990,225 children 10 to 15 years employed for wage in the United States.

In 1920 this number had been reduced to 1,059,855, or a decrease of 46.7 per cent.

A part of this gratifying decrease is real. A considerable part is apparent, since the census of 1920 was taken in January when the fields were empty and the schools were full; while that of 1910 was taken in April when agriculture is at its height.

AT LEAST A MILLION

However, even if we accept the census figures without qualification there are still more than a million negative answers to this question: "Is child labor a thing of the past?"

Besides, there are the thousands of children under 10 years of age of whom the census takes no count, but who nevertheless work in our fields, tenement sweatshops, streets and in domestic service. The exact number of these no one knows.

And it is these very industries which did not come under the jurisdiction of the federal laws and for which the states make practically no provision. But they furnish the vast majority of our child workers.

In agriculture alone the census shows 81 per cent child laborers. This means that hundreds of thousands of children of school age are kept out of school several months a year with the resultant retardation and illiteracy.

An agent of the National Child Labor Committee found a family of six children — 17, 16, 14, 12, 9 and 8—who worked 52 acres of beet with their parents. The children have never attended school.

The Philadelphia Bureau of Compulsory Education reports about 1044 children were absent from one school district during September and October due to working on the cranberry bogs in New Jersey.

TOTS IN COTTON FIELDS

But not only children of school age are conscripted into farming. If they are too young to go to school they can do a man's work in the cotton fields, for example.

One report from Texas tells us that a 5-year-old has picked a bale of cotton this season. Another 5-year-old can boast of picking 72 pounds of cotton before sundown on Oct. 27, and had very "sorry" cotton to pick in.

Child labor in street trades is another field of neglect. Thirty-seven states have no state-wide regulation of street trades; more than half have none at all.

One of the most pernicious forms of unregulated child labor, aggravated because of concealment is tenement homework in our cities.

Many industries make this part of their system of production and small children are considered an asset in this underpaid, unsanitary, monotonous work.

In dimly gas-lit, ill-ventilated tenements, children play truant or work far into the night on jewelry, embroidery, tags, powder puffs. They usually make less than five cents an hour.

If they are of pre-school age, so much the better; they can work all day!

A study of homework in Rhode Island recently made by the Children's Bureau showed that 4 per cent of the 2000 children for whom detailed information was given were under 6 years of age.

CHILD SLAVE OF 13

A girl of 13 was reported by a Newark, (N. J.) school principal as frequently missing school. An agent of the National Child Labor Committee found her at 6 o'clock in the far corner of a dimly lighted room, embroidering on a black dress outlined in black pencil. For this dress, elaborately embroidered, she receives ninety cents, furnishing her own frame at a cost of 60 cents. It takes her two or three days to embroider a dress. Her mother remarks: "It's a pity she has to go to school."

A little boy of eight is an expert embroiderer. "He was embroidering women's night dresses when I called," reports the investigator, "and his mother assured me that he would do a dozen that morning."

For each gown he received a penny. These are but scattered sketches that might be multiplied by thousands.

As the National Child Labor Committee has always pointed out, child labor is a national, not a sectional problem.

The committee feels that the situation created by the recent Supreme Court decision and the extent of child labor as it still exists call definitely for an amendment to the Constitution which shall give Congress the power to legislate on behalf of America's children.

The overwhelming sentiment of the country is probably in favor of a constitutional amendment which shall make it possible for Congress to deal efficiently with our child labor problem.

Child labor is a national evil, involving loss and damage to the man-power of the nation as a whole.

Adult male and female citizens are now assured federal protection in the Constitution. We can do no less for our children.

FORD CLOSED CAR SALES BIG

Sales for This Year Almost Certain to Eclipse Output

If the demand for sedans and coupes built by the Ford Motor company continues to grow during 1923 as it did last year, approximately 500,000 closed cars will be turned out. But the forecast is that production will be even greater than this.

The company's home and foreign plants built 248,728 Coupes and Sedans last year as against 218,510 in 1921, an increase of 59 per cent in the popularity of the Ford closed models, in itself a sensational feature of 1922 production.

The number of Coupes built largely exceeded the number of Sedans. Coupe output was 138,382; that of Sedans, 150,346.

In 1921 there were more Sedans built than Coupes, but last year reversed this. It is interesting to note that the company turned out approximately 105,403 more Coupes last year than in 1921, showing that the Ford Coupe is the most popular car on the market. Combined Coupe production for 1919, 1920, and 1921, was 75,401. The extent of the growing tendency to purchase closed cars may be seen in the fact that the 1922 production of 138,382 Coupes was nearly as great as the output of three years combined. The Sedan increase last year over 1921 was approximately 21,515.

EASY FOR DRIVERS

Motoring Is Simplified by Improvement of Parts

Automotive engineers and inventors are planning to make things easier for the auto driver.

Their combined efforts of late have brought such results as to take the "let out the name," "pleasure car" for any automobile. Only a few years ago, a driver used to curse the man who picked that name while he tried to replace a punctured tire or climb a hill without developing a knock.

Now, engineers have gone so far ahead in perfection of the engine—although there is much more to be done here—that they are directing their inventive faculties toward improving details.

For instance, one auto manufacturer has decided to do away with levers on his car. Instead, the automatic shift is installed. Even the emergency brake lever is abolished, and in its place is a brake that operates from the dash. The controls for gear shifting are on the wheel, below the spark and gas levers.

CONTROLS IMPROVED
The dash instruments are being improved, simplified and collected into one group. In one case, all instruments are put over the center of the steering wheel, so that the driver will watch them more closely.

A western inventor has designed an apparatus by which a tire may be removed or attached by the mere turning of a single lug. That, if it proves efficient, ought to take the last worry off the mind of the driver, as regards tires. For the tire makers have improved that part to such a degree, that there is little more trouble with it.

Lubrication of the chassis is simple. On some cars, all the driver has to do is push a hand pump on the dash and the junction of moving parts on the car are oiled. The pressure system of oiling has superseded the old hand methods.

SIMPLICITY SOUGHT

Everything new is a step toward simplicity—and ease for the driver. Practically all parts have been made easily accessible. Squeaks are being taken out of the bodies. The electric wiring is simpler and the whole ignition system, on most cars, is more easily understood by the lay driver.

Accessories are being made to add to the comfort of the rider and ease in driving. Headlights are being designed which will take the glare out of the eyes of oncoming auto drivers and at the same time illuminate the road more fully than heretofore. Professor R. C. Gowdy of the University of Cincinnati has designed a headlight that he says will do all this. And besides, ordinary window glass takes place of the powerful lenses in other lights. The reflector, he explains, does the work.

Manufacturers are allowing for attachment of other helpful accessories. For instance, brackets are attached to the chassis for bumpers, so they will stay on securely.

Popularity of the enclosed car has risen by leaps and bounds, despite a fault which builders are trying their best to correct. That is the steady, bothersome hum while the auto is in motion.

The hum, say coach designers, comes from the transmission in the rear and is increased greatly in volume within the sedan. The enclosed body, they explain, acts like a large drum and the slightest noise close to it becomes a heavy sound.

To correct this drum-like effect of the sedan is a problem for which body builders are seeking a solution.

VOCATIONAL PLAN IS LAUDED

Many Ex-Service Men Have Reestablished Usefulness

SALARIES ARE LARGER

Peak of Number Who Receive Training is Past

(BY LEMUEL BOLLES)

INDIANAPOLIS, — (Special)— When the World War ended this country was brought face to face with problems of having tens of thousands of young men on its hands who were so disabled it was impossible for them to return to their old occupation to earn a living.

The Federal Board of Vocational Training, was created to handle and develop this work, and out of its activities grew a phase new to Americans—vocational rehabilitation. This meant roughly teaching new jobs to men who had been rendered unfit for their old jobs by war injuries.

The work of the federal board developed, but progress was not rapid. Dissatisfaction had arisen through the functioning of other governmental agencies charged with the care of veterans.

VETERANS BUREAU

At the instance of the American Legion, Congress, in 1921, created the United States Veterans Bureau, which immediately absorbed all activities in the care of veterans and began the elimination of the conflicting forces.

The federal board and its activities was absorbed by the bureau. Colonel Charles R. Forbes, director of the bureau, placed Colonel Robert I. Rees in charge of the vocational rehabilitation with the title of assistant director.

The policy of the veterans bureau has been to train men for vocations where their disabilities are not a handicap. A vocation is selected for a man individually, where his disabilities will not handicap him in following it successfully.

On Sept. 1, 1922, 96,941 disabled veterans were receiving vocational training under the veterans bureau. These men are receiving instruction in practically all of our large universities, colleges, and vocational schools.

NUMBER REHABILITATED

They are being trained in approximately 350 different trades, vocations, professions, or in agriculture.

On the same date 23,503 had completed their training and had obtained employment.

The peak of the vocational training has been reached and passed, unless the provisions of the law are further liberalized by Congress.

The high water mark was reached in March, 1922, when there were 109,805 veterans in training. In July, 1919, there were 5926 veterans in training; in July, 1920, there were 39,761; in July, 1921, 87,348; and in July, 1922, 96,941.

The number rehabilitated in July, 1919, was 109; in July, 1920, 1120; in July, 1921, 4860; in July, 1922, 17,251.

The total number who had entered training Oct. 1, 1922, was 151,787. The total in training at the same date was 96,941 and the total number who had completed training was 22,505. Nine hundred and nineteen disabled veterans have died while in training.

SALARIES INCREASED

In June of last year Colonel Forbes, director of the bureau, established an employment service, as the result of a conference attended by the legion. This organization establishes contact with employers and obtains employment opportunities for rehabilitated veterans. Many of the positions obtained pay salaries considerably above the pre-war salaries of these men.

There are also hundreds who have completed their training and have opened up business establishments for themselves.

Who will say the new method has not shown a distinct improvement over the old pension system? Is it not only fairer to the disabled themselves, but better for the country to have these defenders of our flag again become productive factors in the economic fabric of our nation?

PROVE OF HOGS VALUED AT $200, THOUGHT STOLEN, DRIVEN HOME BY HUNGER

Twenty-four hogs, thought to have been stolen from Daniel Ramga in Logan, Auglaize-co., are at home again, having returned from a three-mile migration to Tom Bowsher's place, where they fed up on alfalfa until the week-end fall of snow became too deep for them to reach the growth.

The swine returned home of their own accord, it is stated, probably driven by hunger. The hogs escaped at night. After they were missed, Ramga enlisted the aid of officers at three counties in a search for the animals, valued at $200.

TIME EXTENSION FOR WEST VIRGINIA TAGS

Chief of Police T. A. Lanker has received instructions, it was announced Saturday, to honor last year's West Virginia automobile license tags in use on vehicles up to and including March 15.

West Virginia officials have been unsuccessful in meeting the demand for this year's license plates, the statement says.

Use by Ohio motorists of 1922 license permits will not be legal after February 15. Police have instructions to arrest anyone found after that date whose car is operated without bearing 1923 tags.

PLANNING TO FLY ACROSS OCEAN

Regular Transatlantic Airplane Service Scheduled for 1923

DETAILS ARE WORKED OUT

Stations to be Anchored at Sea Every 400 Miles

PILADELPHIA — (Special) —

Regular daily flying passenger service back and forth across the Atlantic ocean will be an accomplished fact in 1923!

And the trip—each way—will be made in about 30 hours!

This is the belief of Edward R. Armstrong, a noted engineer, aviator and inventor of Philadelphia, who has just completed plans outlining in detail the establishment of this extraordinary service.

He proposes to construct eight gigantic stations which will be anchored at intervals of 400 miles across the Atlantic ocean. My methods which he has perfected it will be possible to anchor these stations in fixed places and stabilize them so that they will be free from the roll and pitch which even the most mammoth ocean liners are subjected to.

Each station or "seadrome" will be 1200 feet long, 400 feet wide, and have a platform of 11 1-2 acres on which the seaplanes can alight. A crew of about 125 men will be stationed on each seadrome. There will be complete radio-telephone and wireless telegraph receiving and broadcasting stations, meteorological bureau, aeroplane repair shop and hotel accommodations for overnight guests. Between stations huge buoys—one every 50 miles—illuminated at night by acetylene gas, will mark the course of this new White Way.

Ten planes will leave the American terminal—say at Atlantic City—daily, and ten other planes will leave the English terminal—possibly at Plymouth—daily. Each plane will carry from 30 to 50 passengers, two operators, and will have additional space for carrying mail and express packages equivalent in weight to one-half the total passenger load.

Of no time will a plane be more than one hour and a half away from a station. The stopovers at the stations will vary from 15 minutes to an hour. Buys will be served at every other station. The planes will travel at a speed ranging from 100 to 150 miles an hour and at times possibly up to 200 miles an hour, providing there is a favorable wind.

The proposed course across the Atlantic will be south of a line that divides the ocean into what might be called two "weather parts" south of this line the ocean is free of 95 per cent of the hazards caused by fog, storms, and icebergs.

Armstrong says that so far as the flying phases of his plan are concerned there is not a detail that is not already an accomplished fact. His two really new contributions are his methods of anchoring and stabilizing his mid-ocean stations.

Judge Reverses Order As Battle For Child Opens

Battle for the custody of Eldin,

13, son of Charles and Grace Robinson, of Lafayette, is seen in common pleas court March 26, when final testimony in a divorce action brought by Mrs. Robinson will be heard by Judge Fred C. Becker.

Mrs. Robinson Saturday morning testified as to the alleged association of her husband with other women.

Judge Fred C. Becker entered a decree giving her a divorce and custody of the child. Then objection was entered by counsel for Robinson. He asserted that the boy should be brought into court and allowed to choose between his parents.

Robinson, counsel declared, did not desire to oppose his wife's divorce action, but wanted his son and was prepared to care for him. The boy is now with his grandparents at Lafayette. Robinson is an implement salesman and is traveling in the southwest. He was unable to come to Lima for the hearing Saturday.

Judge Becker vacated the decree and declared he will hear testimony March 26. The best interests of the boy are paramount to all other consideration, the court declared.

FAIR BOARD FAILS TO SECURE NEW LEASE ON DRIVING CLUB GROUNDS

Efforts made by officers of the Allen County Fair board to bring about a renewal of the lease on the Lima Driving Park association grounds, to assure a 1923 county fair, failed Saturday, it was announced by Secretary G. DeLo Cremonese of the fair board, following a meeting.

Inability to get action on the project resulted in adjournment by the board until a future date, subject to the call of Charles Sprague, Shawnee, president.

Board of Ed Youngpeter of Marion, as treasurer of the fair board was announced.

PERFECT GIRL AT HOLYOKE

Develops Best of Forms Thru Athletic Sports

REFUSES TO DIET HERSELF

Winner of American Distinction Likes Action

HOLYOKE, Mass. (Special)—America's most perfectly formed schoolgirl is Miss Miriam Jones, 16-year-old sophomore at Holyoke.

She eats candy, drinks ice cream sodas, likes detective stories and hasn't any rules for development except to engage in athletic sports.

Miss Jones attributes her prowess to:

"Athletics. I go in for all kinds of sports."

At the stadium she broke the record for the running high jump by two inches and the running broad jump by 5 1-2 inches, setting a mark of 4 feet 6 inches in the former event, and 14 feet 8 1-2 inches in the latter.

These were the only two events she was allowed to enter but she has done 8 feet 3 in the standing broad jump, which is 14 1-2 inches longer than the winning jump at the stadium.

Miss Jones is also a clever swimmer and plays basketball.

Despite her youth, the schoolgirl Venus has a decided personality. Although she is surprisingly shy, there is a mischievous twinkle in her eye and her friendly smile reveals a row of even, white teeth. Her hair is blond and bobbed and she wears the middy blouse, short, dark skirt and brown woolen hose so much in favor with the athletic high school miss.

"Plenty of action," is Miss Jones' prescription for herself. "I like action."

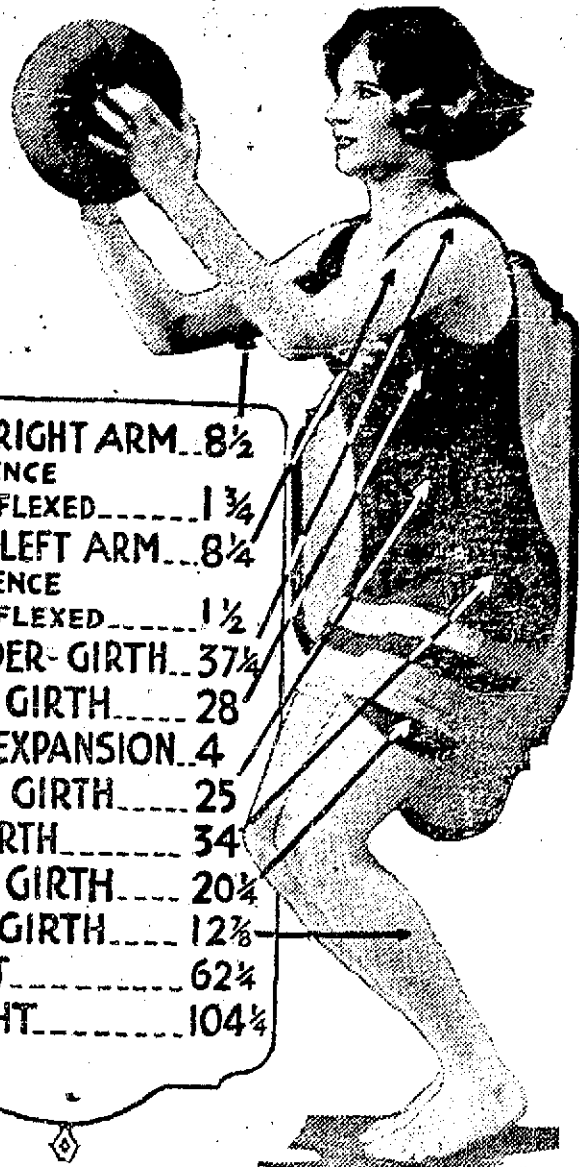

Her record shows that she puts her doctrine into practice. There won't be a schoolgirl track record safe for two more years, for Miss Jones has that mark school ahead.

After she finishes school here, she expects to go to a gymnastic training school in New Haven—for this young champion is going to help other girls to follow in her footsteps.

5-CENT FARE UP TO CONGRESS

Solons Will be Asked to Pass on Street Car Rates

NATION WATCHES FIGHT

Action for District May Affect Other Communities

(BY LAWRENCE MARTIN)

WASHINGTON. — (United Press) — The cause of the great American strap-hangers is to be championed anew in congress.

Cities have been trying ever since the war to get car fares back to something like the pre-war level and the fight that is being waged in congress to bring back five-cent fares to the District of Columbia.

This fight, Senator McKellar, Tennessee, said today, is just beginning. In spite of the setback he and other advocates of lower fares sustained the other day, McKellar announced he would soon present two measures upon which congress will put on record as to whether it stands with the great army of automobile-less strap-hangers, or with the street car companies and other public utilities corporations. These measures are:

1—Providing that the street car companies in the District of Columbia shall not be allowed to charge a rate of fare higher than that fixed in their original charters, namely, 5 cents, with free transfers.

2—Abolishing the public utilities commission in the district, which now fixes the rate of fare.

OPERATE FOR THE PEOPLE

"If that does not work," said McKellar, "I would favor government railway lines. I am not in favor of public ownership as a general thing, but rather than see the people of the District or of any city in the country saddled with the burden of extra car fare, when there is no real reason for it, I would favor that the lines be operated for, and in the benefit of, the public."

Car fare in Washington is eight cents. That means an added burden of $1.50 a month of every regular patron of the lines, McKellar said. That sum is not burdensome on many, but in the case of the head of a family who is sending two children to high school—as thousands of Washingtonians are—it amounts to $4.50 a month out of a family income which is usually just big enough to cover the actual needs. The bigger the family the worse the burden.

Public ownership advocates in the senate and house are prepared to help McKellar all they can. They all realize that the situation in Washington, the capital city, is significant, because congress deals with it, by reason of the fact that Washington has no city government chosen by its people, who are voteless.

What congress does about car fares here is likely to affect the efforts in other communities to obtain adequate service at a reasonable fare, they believe.

FIVE LAME DUCKS

When the senate the other day sidestepped a direct vote on the question, as raised by McKellar, the votes of five senators who go out of office March 4 turned the scale. If they had voted the other way, the senate would have been given a chance to decide the fare question on its merits.

The capital city has two traction companies, one of which is so prosperous that its officials did not wish to accept a recent fare increase. The other, however, is so poor it is constantly clamoring for more fare. Efforts to get them to merge have thus far proved unavailable. So also have efforts to get the "poor" company to apply to its needs some of the profits of the electric light company, which it controls.

With the increase in population incident to the war, the situation has grown steadily worse, and congress has been importuned to take a hand. Now McKellar declares the fight will go on until the low fare advocates win, either by getting the fares reduced outright or by putting the lines into control of the government.
